Starks moving to a new home in the gold country

By J.R. Deaton
STAFF WRITER

EL CERRITO — Longtime and well known El Cerritans Thom and Judy Stark have decided to turn the "lemons"of an eviction notice into the "lemonade" of a new home in the gold country.

The Starks are buying a home on a 5.4-acre site in Mariposa County and plan to relocate there in stages by mid-September.

Both express sadness to be leaving Bay Area friends and connections, but both say they look forward to the space, home-ownership and horse-owning opportunities that country living provides.

Last June the couple received an eviction notice from their landlord, who plans to renovate the Carlson Boulevard house that they have called home for more than two decades in El Cerrito.

"This is a closing of one chapter of our lives and the beginning of another," Thom Stark said in a talk earlier this week. "The universe has very accommodatingly written a happy ending to the closing of this chapter."

Thom ran unsuccessfully for the City Council in 1995 and 1997, has served as the president of the Friends of the El Cerrito Library and was a member of the Contra Costa County Charter Commission.

He has also been a member of the El Cerrito Chamber of Commerce and was a co-chair of the Committee of the Whole from its inception in April 1998 until last June, when moving plans forced his resignation.

Both Thom and Judy Stark have been active in civic business over the years, including the 1996 Neighbor to Neighbor effort, the Del Norte and South Gateway design processes and the city's recent General Plan update effort.

Judy has also been a volunteer with the Friends of the El Cerrito Library and Thom served three years as the organization's president.

Judy worked in the shoe department of the old Plaza Emporium store for 11 years before it closed and she still talks to former customers around town from time to time.

Until the couple the got the eviction notice, Thom could be heard at most every City Council meeting, quoting and alluding to the greats from literature, science, politics and contemporary culture.

Speaking at the meetings without notes -- usually with humor and always with insight — Stark has a reputation of speaking his mind to friend and foe alike.

He became involved in El Cerrito politics in 1994, after attending a council meeting to question the wisdom of elim-

Legal battle over card room at Golden Gate Fields comes to an end

By Clare Curley and Kate Darby Rauch
STAFF WRITERS

ALBANY — A five-year legal battle over building a card room at Golden Gate Fields racetrack ended Wednesday when a citizens group fighting the gaming venture won $902,000 in a court-sanctioned settlement.

Most of the money, which came from former track owner Ladbroke Racing California, Inc., will cover the fees of attorney Bob Outis.

Outis, on behalf of Citizens for Responsible Government (CRG), sued Ladbroke and the city in 1995 over various ways the card room issue was presented to voters in 1994. Voters approved the venture by 186 votes after months of emotional debate.

Wednesday's agreement in Alameda County Superior Court also includes language that essentially nullifies the ballot measure.

"Today it's over," said CRG President David Arkin. "It's a wonderful thing that we've been able to do for the citizens of Albany — all the citizens, not just those opposed to the card room. It does restore the faith that citizens can make a difference."

As a formality, the City Council voted unanimously to terminate the development agreement at last week's meeting, with Mayor Jon Ely, a former CRG board member, signing the agreement. Councilman Ed McManus was not present at the meeting.

Arkin, who appeared before the council, said appellate court rulings made earlier in the case will have a lasting effect beyond Albany, particularly the court questioning whether an environmental report should have been done before the project went to the voters.

"I think this is substantial victory for the California environment," Arkin said.

The citizens group, composed mostly of Albany residents, will keep about $50,000 of the settlement to cover expenses. Dan Taafee, a second lawyer consulting on the case, also will get a share.

Cain hopes to keep up with the Joneses in Albany school race

By Clare Curley
STAFF WRITER

Despite the Albany School District's extension for people to declare their candidacy for school board, only one outsider had turned in election papers by the Wednesday deadline, giving incumbents Bill Cain and Owen H. Jones a good chance at winning their seats back in November.

To keep voters on their toes, Albany parent Owen T. Jones will also be running for one of the two vacancies.

The new Jones has familiarized himself with the schools as a room parent and chair of the Albany High School Site Council, a body that helps earmark money coming in from the state.

"I'd like to see the administration and board be more accessible (to residents)," he said. Though he doesn't have a specific agenda, he added, "I would like to see that we have a balanced budget and to improve Cougar Field, and I'm interested in special education."

The architect and Albany Education Foundation vice president has three children, one at Albany High School and another at Marin Elementary. The middle child will be attending Arrow Smith, a private high school in Berkeley, in the fall.

"That was a family decision based on his middle school experience, and I don't want to particularly belabor (the issue)" he said.

If elected, he will join Vice President Marsha Skinner (Nov. 2002), members Mary Wallmann (Nov. 2002) and David Farrell (Nov. 2002), and student board member Oscar Whelan (June 30, 2001).

A shortage of outsiders running for election is not new. The 1998 election was a no-contest, with Wallmann, Farrell and incumbent Skinner running for the three open seats on the board.

Carolie Sly, PTA member and former president, said the low turnout is understandable.

Bad day for cars in El Cerrito

August 15 was a bad day for car owners in El Cerrito.

The night of Aug. 15 a car parked on the 6600 block of Cutting Boulevard was broken into and ransacked, and the window of another car was shattered on the 2900 block of San Mateo Avenue, according to police reports.

The same night, someone entered the Honda of El Cerrito's new vehicle storage lot on the 6400 block of Schmidt Lane by cutting the chain-link fence and attempted unsuccessfully to pry open the side door of a car. The rear window of a different car on the lot was also smashed, according to police, but the car was not entered.

On a brighter note, police found a 1981 Datsun that was stolen from the 900 Liberty Street block on Aug. 15 and returned it to its owner the next day.

There were no suspects at the time of any of the reports.

■ Police are still looking for a 1986 red Toyota pickup that was stolen on Aug. 17 from the 700 block of Elm Street.

Chamber sets date for fifth annual October Fiesta

El Cerrito Chamber

By Sewall Glinternick

The El Cerrito Chamber of Commerce's fifth annual October Fiesta, featuring free live entertainment, fabulous food, and an outstanding selection of merchandise for sale, will be held on Saturday, Oct. 21.

Chamber Director Bob Winslow of Winslow Carpet Cleaning Company has been named chairman of this year's fiesta.

In taking his new post, Winslow reported that, due to work in El Cerrito expected to be under way by October, the fiesta - usually held in the center's mall area - will be shifted to the southeast corner of the Plaza's parking lot.

Winslow also revealed that letters seeking co-sponsors, financial backers and exhibitors went out last week.

"Organized by the Chamber of Commerce in 1996 to promote business and to establish an event which would enhance the image of the city, the fiesta has grown with each passing year," said Winslow.

Expressing the hope that this year's fiesta would be "the biggest and best such event ever held in West Contra Costa County," Winslow urged individuals, business groups and community organizations interested in supporting or participating in this event to contact the chamber's office at 510-233-7040 as soon as possible.

Scheduled to be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at its new location, this year's fiesta will once again be held in conjunction with the chamber's semi-annual citywide "Round-Up Sale Days" and the Plaza's regular Saturday Farmer's Market, open 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Once again this event, which regularly attracts outstanding musical entertainment and scores of booths selling food and items made by some of the Bay Area's leading crafts people, will be open to the public free of charge.

Party marks work on Plaza

El Cerrito Chamber of Commerce President Michael Klinger is scheduled to be one of the speakers at next Tuesday's ground-breaking ceremony celebrating the official beginning of work on the revitalization of El Cerrito Plaza.

The celebration, which is being sponsored by Regency Realty, Albertson's and the city of El Cerrito, is scheduled to get under way at 10 a.m., Aug. 29.

A number of community leaders are expected to be on hand for this event, which will feature food, fun and the start of demolition of the old Emporium building.

Stores already approved for the revitalized Plaza include Ross, Old Navy, Bed, Bath and Beyond and the Gap. Regency's tentative plans call for the new Plaza to open in the fall of next year.

Eight more reinvest

The leadership of the El Cerrito Chamber of Commerce is happy to announce that in the past two weeks eight more members have shown their support for the business organization by reinvesting for another year.

The chamber's thanks are extended to Harry Rabin & Co.; the AAA, 44 Kearny St.; Muffler Works, 10733 San Pablo Ave.; The Glenn Custom Framing, 7027 Stockton Ave.; West Coast Children's Center, 545 Ashbury Ave.; Miracle Auto Painting, 5327 Jacuzzi St., Richmond; Golden Dynasty/Cindy's Gifts, 10140 and 10148 San Pablo Ave.; Walgreen Drug Store, 11565 San Pablo Ave.; and Abbey Pet Hospital, 11070 San Pablo Ave.

In reporting these new reinvestments, Chamber of Commerce Manager Sewall Glinternick urged all members who have not extended for another year to do so as soon as possible.

Membership dues, he explained, are what finance the day-to-day operation of the El Cerrito Chamber of Commerce.

New nighttime service

A limited number of brochures covering the AC Transit North Richmond night service running through El Cerrito are now available at the local chamber office, 10848 San Pablo Ave.

Line 376 travels from the El Cerrito Del Norte BART station to Pinole Vista via North Richmond every 30 minutes from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m.

Additional funding allowed AC Transit to dramatically increase service on Line 376 from every hour to every half hour, and paved the way for extending service to BART in El Cerrito.

Benefit spaghetti feed

Tickets are now available for a benefit spaghetti dinner to be staged Sunday, Sept. 17, by the El Cerrito Lions Club, associate members of the Chamber of Commerce.

To be held at the El Cerrito Masonic Center, 6922 Stockton Ave., from 4-7 p.m., all proceeds will go to help fund the service club's many local charitable programs.

Tickets costing $5 for adults and $3 for children under 12 may be purchased at the Chamber of Commerce office, 10848 San Pablo Ave., from any member of the El Cerrito Lions Club or at the door on the day of the event.

Sales tax boost reported

Total sales tax revenue produced in El Cerrito during the first quarter of this year was reported to be 16 percent higher than the total recorded in the first quarter of 1999.

According to the state Board of Equalization, the final sale and use tax total produced by local firms during the first three months this year is expected to be $522,537.

First quarter gains were led by new auto sales, service stations and economic segments of department stores. Declines came in sales at food stores, furniture/appliances, and wholesale building materials.

The states figures indicate the city's top 40 sales tax producers contributed 82.8 percent of the total revenue collected between April 1999 and April 2000. These top 40 producers (listed alphabetically) include:

IN BRIEF

Police department openings

EL CERRITO — Police Chief Scott Kirkland reports that the application process for the positions of sergeant and corporal have been opened for internal candidates. Applications will be accepted until Sept. 8 and an examination will be given on Sept. 20.

"The assessment panels will take place during the week of Sept. 25," Kirkland said. "We are hopeful that promotions will occur by mid-October."

Kirkland also reported that the department has opened the recruitment process for the police officer position. The written test, physical agility test and oral panel are scheduled for Sept. 16.

Swim Center closure

EL CERRITO — Swim Center staff have begun preparing for the center's closure so it can be reconstructed as approved by the voters last March as part of Measure A.

"Although an exact closing date has yet to be determined, letters of request have been mailed to all neighboring communities' private and public pools seeking available pool rental space for the city's core swim programs," said Monica Kortz, community services manager, in a report to the City Council earlier this month.

"Staff would like to relocate our recreational swim team, masters swim team, water aerobics program and our summer day camp swimming program," Kortz said. "It is our hope to continue to offer these programs as El Cerrito-sponsored activities in space rented from other facilities."

If Swim Center staff are unable to find rentable space for the El Cerrito programs, patrons may be accommodated in programs offered by neighboring communities, Kortz said.

Swim staff who are usually required in the winter months to keep the city's pools in operation have been given alternative work assignment options.

Board approves facades, floor plans for Plaza buildings

By J. R. Deaton
STAFF WRITER

EL CERRITO — At its meeting last week, the Design Review Board approved facades and floor plans for seven of the eight new Phase I buildings of the revitalized El Cerrito Plaza project.

An eighth building, the new Albertson's store planned for the east side of the reconstructed Plaza, will be submitted at a later date for DRB consideration.

Some conditions were placed on the approval, mostly dealing with color choice and architectural finishing touches, that will be subject to city planning staff review. The developers still have to get DRB approval for landscaping plans and for "facelifts" planned for two existing Plaza buildings, said Andrew Johnston, tenant construction manager for Plaza co-owner Regency Realty.

"It's a difficult process and the city is trying to keep a careful watch on it," Johnston said. "We're ecstatic," he said about the final Phase I design approvals.

The approvals included the Ross building planned for the northeast corner of the Plaza, two buildings facing Fairmount Avenue, a "restaurant building" going into the Plaza, the Bed, Bath and Beyond building, and the Old Navy and Gap buildings near San Pablo Avenue.

Along Fairmount, a "split sidewalk," similar to the one at the Fourth Street shopping area in Berkeley, is planned.

"The upper level provides for a continuously level access into each tenant space along the building, while allowing the lower, more public sidewalk to slope with the natural grade," said Jill Keimach, the city's planning manager, in a report to the DRB. Planters, seat walls and steps will create a division between the two levels and steps at the end will allow pedestrians to step down to the lower sidewalk level.

In The Gap building along San Pablo Avenue, a pedestrian terrace was walled in and converted to interior space and a tower structure was redesigned and squared off by the architect to accommodate Gap Inc.'s request for space to add a Gap Kids store toward the front of the store.

DRB members suggested several changes to the building such as adding awnings and detailing to the front of the building. They also suggested raising the entranceway of the tower, to make the entrance more open, apparent and welcoming to the public.

DRB member Daniel Smith and other board members were concerned that the design as presented seemed too much like Gap corporate headquarters and not enough like an inviting retail store.

> "It'll be a wrecking ball or a bulldozer (bringing down the buildings). Regency purchased the property just recently and so we're fast-tracking this thing quite a bit."
> — Andrew Johnston of Regency Realty

"Do I really want to go in there?" Smith asked rhetorically while looking at drawings of the building.

Some of the suggestions will be incorporated by Plaza architect Edward Gee and the designs brought back to planning staff for review.

"It's not going to be a pedestrian friendly environment through the whole Plaza," said DRB member Steve Price earlier this week. But he added that the Fairmount Avenue part of the design will be an "important contribution" to the avenue. "That kind of main street environment right next to a BART station is going to be pretty remarkable in the BART system," Price added.

"It may be another generation before we get a pedestrian friendly design throughout the Plaza given the fact that a lot of the standards for retail now are in a state of flux nationally," Price said.

"It's going to be an important step towards the evolution of El Cerrito," he said about Phase I. "I'm looking forward to seeing how things evolve and I'm hopeful."

The final drawings approved last week were conditioned as part of the Plaza plans approved last year. The Plaza's new tenants were not fully committed at that time, and so designs could not be finalized. Also, ownership of the shopping center was changing.

Rather than holding up Phase I approval, Gee asked for "schematic approval" with the condition that these final building design details would be prepared later for review and approval.

The landscaping plans that will still need DRB approval include all proposed landscaping, lighting, signage, sidewalk design details, location of all street-level mechanical equipment and screening.

Meanwhile, in other Plaza news, an Aug. 29 "demolition party" is planned when either the old Emporium or the Chuck E. Cheese's building is scheduled to come down.

Ceremonies will start at 10 a.m. and will include a wrecking ball and display area for the public to see Plaza plans and reconstruction schedule.

"It'll be a wrecking ball or a bulldozer," bringing down the buildings, Johnston of Regency Realty said. "Regency purchased the property just recently and so we're fast-tracking this thing quite a bit."

Which of the two buildings is demolished on Aug. 29 depends on what permit approvals the company is able to get by that date, he added.

"We're going to have a podium there and some tables and some food," Johnston said. People will be staged 50 to 100 feet away from the buildings with a good view of the demolition activity.

Contact Johnston at (925) 935-5900 for more information about the event.

Starks

inating a crosswalk at Central and San Pablo avenues.

Stark encountered what he felt was a disrespectful and unresponsive City Council and began attending the meetings regularly.

Citing the late El Cerritan Beverly Gent as an example of how to speak up civilly to the City Council, the 47 year-old Stark said he decided then and there that things were going to change in El Cerrito.

"When I decided to become involved, the relationships between the council and those who disagreed with its policy initiatives were extremely hostile and uncivil — and virtually all of that incivility was on the council's side," Stark said. "That's really what got me involved in El Cerrito politics — was outrage at the misbehavior of that council and a determination that that was not going to continue."

"Now, in 2000, all of those councilors are long gone and the current day council uses the tools of humor and courtesy and active listening rather than ad hominine attack and demonization. "I think that's a much better and more desirable state of civic affairs and quite frankly, I think it is not unreasonable to take a certain amount of credit for it."

Stark was asked why he should receive some credit for this apparent civic change.

"It's been a theme of mine since 1994. I insisted on civility in my first run for office," Stark said.

"I knew I had no chance of winning in 1995, but I felt that it was critical that a number of issues be placed on the table for public discussion that would not have been placed on the table had the two incumbent councilors run unopposed.

"I was tired of incivility and unresponsiveness — the unwillingness on the part of the then-incumbent council to face the fact that even your worst enemy can have a good idea."

Both Judy and Thom say they will miss their El Cerrito friends and bonds and plan to return on visits to the Bay Area.

"The things that I'm going to miss the most about El Cerrito have everything to do with the people and the ties that we've grown over the years here" Thom said.

It is clear, however, that Sierra foothills, oak trees and fiddleneck are calling out to the couple.

"I've kind of always been a country girl at heart," Judy said. "I think I'll really welcome the open spaces and the foothills."

"We just fell in love with that section of the country on our first visit to Yosemite," Thom said.

"As we drove into the area where the ground starts to rise up in folds and rocks start to thrust themselves out of the earth, I couldn't shake the feeling that I was coming home."

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Help make WCCUSD Back to School Celebration a success

Join your neighbors and school leaders in supporting public education by contributing to the West County Back to School Celebration. Organizers are seeking donations of school supplies, financial contributions, food, and other materials. They also need entertainers, face painters, storytellers, general volunteers, and more. Let us know what you have to offer.

The celebration will be 10 a.m. to noon, Sept. 9 at Nicholl Park, 32nd and Macdonald Avenue in Richmond.

If you can help, contact school board member George A. Harris III at 234-0700 or gahiii@home.com. Everyone interested in helping is also invited to weekly planning meetings at 6 p.m. Thursdays at the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, 3925 Macdonald Ave., Richmond.

The event welcomes children back to school and celebrates public education. Families are invited to celebrate learning together with bands-on music and sports activities, resources such as vision screening, entertainment, refreshments and more.

Students can pick up vouchers at the fair, redeemable at their school site for school supplies.

Children from all West Contra Costa County Unified School District schools are urged to attend with their families.

Your support is needed more than ever this year. For the first time, this year's celebration is being produced solely by the volunteer efforts and contributions of community organizations and local businesses.

Organizations that have already pledged participation include the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, the West County Education Fund and the Alliance for Public Education. Organizers would like to talk to any additional groups or individuals interested in helping sponsor the event.

El Cerrito High setting up e-mail forum

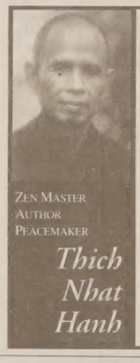

EL CERRITO — The El Cerrito High School PTSA is working to improve communication between home and school by an e-mail communication forum for parents, faculty and the administration this coming school year.

On a weekly basis, those signed up will receive the high school's Weekly Bulletin. This bulletin, posted in each classroom, has information about that week's schedule of sporting events, minimum days, testing days, etc.

On a monthly basis, the forum will distribute the Junior-Senior Bulletin, which contains information about SAT notices, scholarship deadlines, visiting colleges, career fairs, etc.

On an as-needed basis, information will be e-mailed such as special fundraiser dates, KECG 88.1 program specials, and PTSA meetings.

Those interested in being on the e-mail forum should e-mail their name and e-mail address to Joann Steck-Bayat, PTSA Email Coordinator, at jsbayat@home.com.

Fires can be devastating — so be prepared

MARTIN SNAPP

Snapp Shots

Did you read that sad story about the Cal student and her parents who were killed Sunday by an early-morning fire?

It seems incredible that a fire could spread so quickly that they wouldn't have time to escape, but it happens more often than you'd suspect.

I ought to know. A fire broke out in my kitchen a couple of weeks ago, and you wouldn't believe how rapidly it expanded. One moment it was just a tiny spark; and then whoomp! My whole ceiling was suddenly a sheet of flame.

I don't know how I managed to put it out, but it was a very close call. A few more seconds, and it would have been totally out of control. I might have been killed.

Even if I hadn't, I still would have lost everything: my books, my clothes, my campaign button collection, my pictures of Eliza and Nelly, my vial of sand from Omaha Beach, my thank-you note from Betty Ford — everything I hold dearest in the world.

In short, there's not a whole lot you can do once a fire starts. And it's so easy to start. In my case, I was foolishly using a dish towel as a pot holder over an open flame. I turned my back for just a second, and when I turned around again, flames were racing up the wall.

So the smart thing is to prevent it from starting in the first place. And that's where your local fire department comes in. I called the fire prevention experts in Berkeley, Oakland, Albany and El Cerrito, and I was pleased to find they all have programs in place to help us.

They'll tell you the right kind of fire extinguisher to buy. (Hint: get one with a hose, not a nozzle.)

They'll tell you the fastest way to report a fire. (Hint: Don't use a cell phone to call 911; that'll connect you to a dispatcher way out in Vallejo. Use a regular phone instead; it'll connect you to someone local.)

They'll tell you the best place to put your smoke detector. (Hint: Put it near your bedroom, not your kitchen. The whole point is to wake you out of a sound sleep.)

And if you like, a firefighter will even come out to your house or place of business and inspect it for you — for free! Since I live in Berkeley, I called Assistant Fire Chief Dave Orth; and he came over to my place and pointed out all my dumb mistakes, like storing combustible materials underneath the stairway leading up to my apartment — my only means of escape.

If you live in Albany, the person to call is Fire Marshall Brian Crudo at 528-5775. If you live in Berkeley, call Orth at 644-6666. In Oakland, the person to call is Capt. Vicky Evans-Robinson at 238-7805. And in El Cerrito or Kensington, call Pat Caftel, head of the NEAT (Neighborhood Emergency Assistance Teams) program, at 525-7268.

Don't think it can't happen to you. Not only can it happen, it will happen, sooner or later. (Or have we forgotten the Berkeley-Oakland Hills firestorm already?)

"There are four stages of denial," says Caftel. "One: It can't happen here. Two: It can't happen to me. Three: If it does happen, it won't be bad. Four: If it does happen and it's bad, there's nothing I can do about it."

Well, there is something you can do about it. Crudo, Caftel, Orth and Evans-Robinson are here to help. Just give them a call.

The conventions are over, and it's time for the candidates to hit the hustings. Which naturally raises the question: What's a husting?

Answer: Back in the 19th century, a husting was the platform the candidates stood on while delivering their speeches.

Those were old days, before the introduction of the secret ballot. On Election Day, the candidates would get up on the husting and address the voters.

Then they'd vie with each other in an unashamed attempt to bribe the voters by handing out free booze. (George Washington once lost an election for delegate to the Virginia House of Burgesses because his opponent was more liberal with the libations. It was the only election he ever lost, and he never made that mistake again. The next time, he showed up with a wagonload of whiskey.)

When everyone was thoroughly drunk, each voter would stand up, one by one, in front of all his neighbors, and announce his choice. (And I do mean "his." No women allowed.)

Speaking of campaign rhetoric, I don't care what the pundits say, I think Gore gave a good speech.

The talking heads are faulting him because he didn't attack Bush, but they missed the point. The purpose of the speech wasn't to undercut Bush; it was to undercut Nader.

Gore has clearly made the calculation that there's no way he's going to pry away any Bush voters, so why bother? Besides, he doesn't need them. If you look at the main issues in this election — health care, education, the environment, Social Security, campaign finance reform — there's a clear Democratic majority on each one. Gore's task was to mobilize those voters and make sure they don't vote for Nader instead.

That's why he gave that populist speech. Its laundry list of liberal programs may be a turn-off for Republicans, but they're music to the ears of that crucial eight percent of the California electorate who have been flirting with Nader. If Gore can get them back, California becomes a sure state for him, and the dynamics of the election suddenly change.

It means Gore won't have to spend any time or money here. He can divert all those resources to the battleground states in the Midwest, while sending Joe Lieberman down to southern Florida, with its many Jewish retirees in Miami Beach, to make life miserable for Bush in his brother Jeb's home state.

And speaking of Nader, I was at the Berkeley farmers market on Saturday when I met three young people — 16-year-old Zoe Sachs-Arellano of El Cerrito, 21-year-old Robert Cruikshank of Berkeley, and 22-year-old Christine Viez Taylor of Berkeley — who were staffing the Nader table.

They were so sweet, so sincere, so idealistic. I was about to say they reminded me of the way I was when I was their age, but the truth is they reminded me of the way I wish I had been at their age. Sorry for trotting out a cliché, but with fine young people like these, I have no fears for the future of our country.

The only sour note was struck by an angry woman who came up and furiously berated them for "not being diverse enough."

After she finished her little screed, I asked them about their ethnic backgrounds. Sure enough, Zoe is half Brazilian and one quarter Mexican, and Christine is half Argentine.

And the woman? She was white, naturally.

Speaking of political correctness, someone wrote a letter to the editor of the Montclarion, accusing me of being "homophobic" because I listed among Oakland City Council candidates Judy DeVries and Pamela Drake's assets the fact that they're both mothers and understand the bread-and-butter issues that affect families.

Huh? Don't gays and lesbians have kids, too?

And speaking of political incorrectness, if you're wondering if I've received any anti-Semitic messages since my [illegible] Joe Lieberman, the answer is [illegible].

VIEWPOINT

Being Jewish is in

RONNIE CAPLANE
Under Construction

"Jewish is in," someone told me the other day. "Jewish is in?" I asked.

"Yeah," she said. "Jewish is in. Because of Lieberman, Jewish is in."

And I wondered whether if that meant that after all these years of trying to be cool, a trend-setter, the standard by which other people measure themselves — did that mean that I too was in? I'm Jewish.

Well, that's not what she meant. She meant that if she plastered the word "Jewish" all over her press releases, newspapers were more likely to take notice. But she's a public relations person, and that's what they think. Always looking for an angle to grab an editor's attention.

But maybe she was on to something. Did Lieberman's nomination mean that, after 4,000 years, Jews are now mainstream?

"It really scares me," my friend Joan said when I asked her what she thought about Lieberman. "I'm afraid it will bring out a lot of anti-Semitism, and that will make me really depressed."

I know that fear. It's born of insecurity, the suspicion that although we think we're part of society, others see us as outsiders, as not really belonging. It comes from the offhand remark by the person from whom you least expect it about Jews being cheap or having big noses. Remarks that people try to excuse with "but you're not like that" or "you don't look Jewish." It made me think about a guy who once asked me out. When he found out I was Jewish, he asked about the Jewish conspiracy. I told him there was no such thing. He told me there was, and that it was only a matter of time before my parents told me the details. And on the night of our date, he stood me up.

Yes, anti-Semitism is depressing, and it's scary. What if Lieberman costs Gore votes? What if Gore loses? Will the Jews be blamed?

And what about the director of the Dallas chapter of the NAACP who said Lieberman was a bad choice because Jews only care about money? But he got fired, and other African-American leaders spoke about the bond between Jews and blacks. How we were arrested together and went to jail together during the Civil Rights movement.

I don't expect that any time soon synagogues will be flooded with people asking to convert. It's not what Judaism is about, anyway; but maybe there is something to this "Jewish is in" idea. Imagine little girls wanting to grow up and be just like Hadassah Lieberman. Could gefilte fish become the paté of the 21st century? Instead of chocolate chip cookies, maybe Tipper and Hadassah will bake a potato latke bake-off. It's possible. Already the words "shutzpah" and "mensch" have made the front page of several major papers. Maybe "plotz" and "tzouris" will be next. Maybe Yiddish words for which there is no English equivalent will become part of the American lexicon. And Lieberman is bringing Jewish humor to what would have been an otherwise boring campaign — with, for example, his proposed campaign slogans: "With malice toward none but a little guilt for everyone" and "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your mother."

I wonder if, when Gore asked Lieberman to share the Democratic ticket with him, Lieberman responded in traditional Hebonics and said, "So, do you want me to?"

Already several people have asked me what it meant when Gore referred to himself as Lieberman's "Shabbas goy" or how Lieberman can observe the Sabbath and still be the vice president. For once, I was in the know. I had the answers and figured it was a good opportunity to educate people a little bit about Judaism. And maybe a year from now, if Gore and Lieberman are elected, no one will have to explain why requiring Jewish students to take a test or play in a football game on Rosh Hashanah or Yom Kippur isn't kosher.

Nominating a Jewish man for vice president is a bold move, a first step toward breaking the barrier for a Jewish president or a black president, or an Asian, Hispanic, gay or woman president. And then maybe — someday — one's religion, skin color or sexual orientation won't be an issue. It could happen.

Oy, I'm furklempt.

Oaks lend beauty, charm to landscape

By Richard Thompson

Regarding the proposed expansion of the Goldman School of Public Policy: Several residents of Cloyne Court, the property which abuts the Goldman School, spoke at the public hearing. All of us are reconciled to the project, although some of us oppose the footprint of the project as being too large.

We want the construction to be done at a civilized hour, and we endorse measures that would mitigate the noise and dust. My own particular concern is that the oak trees on both properties be saved.

Behind the residence of the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff," wrote Colin Powell in his autobiography, "was a broad lawn overlooking the Potomac River. I could point out the Capitol, the Jefferson Memorial, the Washington Monument, and the Lincoln Memorial. There was just one glitch. A huge tree stood right in the middle, marring the panoramic view. I laid out my strategy. The post engineers were to cut down the tree, pull the stump, and lay sod over the scar, and get it all done in an hour. The view over the Potomac was magnificent, unobstructed. I looked down at the thick grass and could barely make out where the tree had stood. Nor did anyone else seem to notice that it was gone. SURPRISE, STEALTH, AND SWIFTNESS HAVE HISTORICALLY BEEN KEY ELEMENTS IN SUCCESSFUL CAMPAIGNS."

If Michael Nacht, dean of the Goldman School of Public Policy, plans to remove the oak trees from the hill adjacent to the former Beta Theta Pi House, in order to add an annex, he needs to brush up on some strategy.

Removing or damaging oak trees, particularly in the wake of the state of emergency with regard to sudden oak tree death in Marin

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

No money for parking garages

Norman La Force begins his letter of Aug. 18 with an ad homonym attack on the El Cerrito City Council instead of dealing with facts. He goes on to claim that the council's preference for a shuttle bus system would "give a subsidy for the well off and wealthy in our community," unsupported either by facts or argument.

Then he misstates the Measure C ballot language. It does say that one way the funds could be spent is for BART parking, but it does not specify parking in El Cerrito nor does it specify parking garages. If, as he says, the people of El Cerrito were told that the measure's funds would build garages at our BART stations, they were misinformed by those who so told them.

In point of fact, the County Counsel's analysis of Measure C included an excerpt from California Public Utilities Code, sections 180000, et seq. The code states that the Measure C moneys "may be allocated by the county transportation authority for the construction and improvement of state highways; the construction, maintenance, improvement, and operation of local streets, roads, and highways; and the construction, improvement, and operation of public transit systems." Note that the code excerpt cited makes no mention of parking lots or garages.

La Force expresses concern over the cost of a shuttle system. Let's see what the garage might cost us. The minimum cost of just the multi-storied garage would be $17,000 per space. This does not include land cost, administration, attendant's wages, policing, maintenance including ticket dispensers; utility costs for elevators, lighting and fans. There is no guarantee that the cost would be as stated above. Other parking structures have been estimated to be much more costly per space: Fort Miley Veterans Hospital, $21,000; S.F. State University, $39,000; De Young Museum at Embarcadero, $65,000; North Beach area of S.F., $110,000.

Assuming the lowest figure cited above, the annual income to cover just building costs would have to be at least $1,700. If, as usual, each space was used only five days a week or 260 days a year, at least $6.50 per day of income would be needed. The private lot opposite the Del Norte station currently gets $5 per day per space. The other costs noted could easily double the required income. The chances of a garage paying for itself are virtually nil. Talk about subsidies!

Importantly, past actions and their results need to be considered. Does anyone believe that the Del Norte BART garage has lessened congestion? Does anyone believe that the garage has lessened on-street parking demand near the station?

La Force's proposal to charge for garage parking, though I agree it should be so, will not change matters unless the city of El Cerrito also charges for street parking. If anything is free, there will be an unlimited demand for it. These are spaces provided by us, the taxpayers, and if someone occupies a space no one else can. It only makes sense that the occupier should pay for that privilege, just as he must in any metropolitan area where there is a high demand for parking spaces.

The reduced use of AC Transit that La Force cites is a result of allowing both residents and non-residents to park for free on El Cerrito streets. As long as that continues to be the case, neither a garage nor a shuttle system will prove effective.

It's high time to try different strategies. As Albert Einstein observed, "Insanity is doing the same thing over and over — and expecting a different result."

Support for scouting

At an early age I was left to raise three sons alone. My only kin resided over 2,000 miles away. After my sons were grown, whenever anyone would praise me for raising three boys by myself, I would quickly share that I didn't do it alone — I had lots of help.

Lots of help translates into a marvelous "support family" that included the Big Brothers program, the YMCA, Little League and the Boy Scouts, plus a church pastor whose motto was "It's better to build boys than to mend men."

These were the volunteers from all walks of life that gave my sons something I couldn't; something they so badly needed — healthy, nurturing, moral male companionship.

A Berkeley police officer won a 10-speed French racing bicycle that he had no need of. He wanted to give it to a boy whose family couldn't afford to give him a bicycle. On Christmas morning a police wagon arrived and my son was asked to step outside.

The officer took the bicycle out of the wagon and presented it to him. It even had a personal bike license on it.

All of these wonderfully caring people helped me raise my sons.

I was saddended but not surprised to read the letter from Mr. Noel and his friends from Northminster Presbyterian Church asking the public's withholding of support for the Boy Scouts.

I am not surprised because, sadly, the "alternative lifestyle" folks have been attempting to tear apart our Presbyterian denomination for over 20 years.

I will continue to support scouting for our young people.

Oakland's worth saving

Why is it that Oakland is a city that always seems to hate itself?

The latest example is the proposed demolition of Jack London Village — that rambling eclectic non-corporate looking bunch of shops and restaurants just down from Jack London Square.

Forever hidden and never well connected to the heart of Jack London Square, the Port of Oakland, the owner, always tried to ignore the very existence of Jack London Village. Now, with a twinkling of those corporate chain stores in their eyes, the Port of Oakland proposes to tear down the village.

But do they have plans? No. We will only get a parking lot, something Oakland's residents put as forbidden in the estuary plan: No parking lots on the waterfront. Our limited waterfront is too precious for storing automobiles.

Not too many years ago, the city attempted to tear down what is now Old Oakland, with its treasure of restored Victorians. Thank goodness we still have Ratto's Market.

Oakland's uptown was not so fortunate. After almost 20 years of "redevelopment," the area between the sold-out-for-almost-every-event Paramount Theater and the still-waiting-for-its-Prince-Charming Fox Theater is still a wasteland.

Unfortunately, we have a mayor who, while espousing the virtues of a lively downtown, is prepared to kill off any chance of such by planting a gated-apartment project right in what could be the heart of a lively theater district. I say, practice what you preach.

Other cities have dynamited similar projects. There is a close analogy to these development schemes proposed by the port and the mayor. Just as the corporate farmers of the Sierra Nevada forests clear cut and plant mono-culture tree farms, the mayor and port only want to plant the mono-culture of corporate development.

I will feel Oakland has begun to turn the corner of not hating itself when the wonderful if-ever-there-was-a-building-that-should-be-a-landmark-but-still-isn't Claremont Hotel ceases putting in its advertisements that it's located in Berkeley. It's not. The entire building sits on Oakland dirt.

Maybe the tide of corporate-only projects will turn.

Does the City Council hate Oakland? Will the siren of visions of corporate chain stores fill their heads?

Dorothy, in the movie, "The Wizard of Oz," said it best when she realized there is no place like home.

Here's hoping the port, the mayor and City Council will recognize a "there" when it's there all along.

Guidelines for Albany school registration

School year opens on Sept. 6

ALBANY — The 2000-2001 school year begins on Wednesday, Sept. 6 at all public schools. The District Service Center, at 904 Talbot Ave., and schools will be closed on Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 4.

Children in kindergarten through eighth grade who have not previously attended Albany elementary schools (grades K-5) or Albany Middle School (grades 6-8) should be registered at the appropriate school office as soon as possible. Elementary school offices are open weekdays from 9 a.m. to noon and 1-3 p.m. for registration. Albany Middle School is open between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Call the school before coming in to register: Cornell School 559-6510, Marin School 559-6520, Ocean View School 528-6480, Albany Middle School 558-3600, Albany High School 559-6550. Children must be 5 years of age by Dec. 2 to enroll in kindergarten and 6 years of age by Dec. 2 to register as first graders. Proof of birth date (original birth certificate or baptismal certificate) must be presented for students in kindergarten and the first grade. Registering your child at the closest school does not guarantee assignment to that school. The district says it may need to assign pupils outside of present school boundaries in order to house an expected enrollment increase.

Parents not residing in Albany who are interested in enrolling new students in Albany schools must apply for enrollment at the District Service Center. Although space is limited, out-of-district applicants for grades K-12 will be placed on a first-come, first-served basis, if classroom space is available.

For students new to Albany High School, registration will be held in the school office, 603 Key Route Blvd., between 7:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. New registrants must be accompanied by a parent and have current immunization records, transcripts from previous schools, and residence verification.

Orientation for all new Albany High School students and their parents will be held on Thursday, Aug. 31 from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. The first day of school is Wednesday, Sept. 6. New pre-registered and continuing students in grades 9-12 should arrive no later than 7:20 a.m. on Sept. 6 to check the homeroom lists that will be posted on the wall outside the counseling office. Homeroom begins at 7:40 a.m.

Registration requires three types of documentation. No registrations will be accepted unless all information is complete. The documentation includes:

1.) Immunization: California requires all students to meet immunization regulations, and the Albany Unified School District will not register students who have not met the law. The "no-shots, no-school" policy prohibits a grace period and does not recognize a parent's signature as verification of immunization. These regulations pertain to all grade levels, kindergarten through high school.

Parents must bring the child's original birth certificate or baptismal certificate (no copies) as proof of age and must complete health forms concerning vaccinations, immunizations, and childhood diseases. Older children who transfer from school-to-school within California should already have immunization records on file. Documentation of the dates of immunizations for polio; DPT; and measles, mumps, and rubella (German measles) for each kindergarten child is required. No child can enter kindergarten this fall unless wihtout these immunizations. Minimum doses required for polio are four, as long as the third dose was received after the fourth birthday, and four doses for DPT, as long as the fourth dose was also received after the second birthday. Measles, mumps, and rubella (MMR) have a single required dose, provided it was received after the first birthday. Hepatitis B vaccine, three doses, is a new requirement for kindergarten and seventh grade entry.

Low-cost childhood immunizations (from $5 to $40 per shot) are available at county health department clinics through the summer at the following locations:

Berkeley: Health Department, 830 University Ave., Berkeley, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 2-4 p.m. (644-8571).

Concord: Health Department, 2355 Stanwell Circle, Concord, every Monday through Thursday, 9-11 a.m. and Friday's 2-3:30 p.m., with the exception of the fourth Friday of the month 2-6 p.m. (925-646-5275).

Oakland: Central Health Clinic, 470 27th St., Oakland. By appointment Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. (271-4263).

Richmond: Public Health Department, County Building, 29th and Bissell streets, Richmond, Monday through Friday, 1:30-3:30 p.m. (374-3101).

2.) Health Screening for Incoming First Grade Students: The Hughes Children's Health Enforcement Act requires parents of all incoming first grade students to submit an approved health examination certificate within 90 days after the child's entry. The certificate states that the student has received appropriate health screening within the prior 18 months. Students without approved certificates will be excluded from school for up to five days. Parents are encouraged to obtain the health examination certificate at the same time as immunizations are completed. Free health screening for low-income children is available through the County Health Department.

3) Evidence of Residency: We define residency as where a child and his/her parent(s)/legal guardian live. A parent must provide three forms of proof of Albany residency:

A lease agreement that can be phone verified or a property deed; at least two of the following with the address imprinted— W-2 form, PG&E or EBMUD document/bill, paycheck, driver's license (not temporary), bank statement, public assistance documents.

If further address verification is needed, a residence verification officer will make unscheduled home visits. If it is determined subsequent to enrollment that a child's residence is not in Albany, the student will be dropped from enrollment in the district.

Other documentation: Students who have previous school transcripts and health records should bring these at the time of registration.

Miscellaneous information: Elementary school lunches are $1.85. Middle and high school lunches are $2. Free and reduced lunches are available for low-income students.

Medical/dental insurance: The district does not carry medical or dental insurance should a child be injured on school premises while under school jurisdiction or through sponsored activities. The California State Education Code authorizes distribution of information about low-cost medical/dental insurance for children. Participation is voluntary, although state law requires any student participating in interscholastic sports to have adequate medical insurance.

'New Start 2000' kicks off school y

Albany High School students and parents are invited to attend "New Start 2000," a special event planned for Thursday, Aug. 31, outside on the deck between the temporary classrooms. School administrators, teachers, counselors, and PTA representatives will be on hand to share information about the upcoming school year, including an update on the progress of the AHS construction project.

All AHS students are encouraged to attend. This will be an opportunity to take care of important business before the start of school on Wednesday, Sept. 6. Class schedules and student photos can be taken care of during the day — the evening features a special program for new students and important resources for new and returning parents.

Schedules and photos

Beginning at 11:30 a.m. and until the end of the event at 7:30 p.m., students will be able to pick up their class schedules and submit any requests to change their programs. In addition, students will receive new student handbooks and planners that include a schedule of athletic events and other extracurricular activities.

Students unable to attend the event may pick up their schedules on the first day of school at their homeroom (homerooms will be posted). Student yearbook and ID photos will be taken by Jostens Photographers, with the schedule: seniors 11:30 a.m. only); juniors 1:30 p.m.; sophomores 3-5 p.m.; freshmen 5-7 p.m.

Students will have their photos at the event (retakes, if photos, without charge, are free). Students unable to attend during their time slot may attend any session or make up day is also set for Little Theater. (Rescheduled day.)

Parent resources

From 4:30-7:30 p.m., AHS students will have the opportunity to join the PTA, buy and order a yearbook, subscribe to the Scrip, subscribe to the school paper, The Cougar, and learn about other parent support groups. Parent handbooks will be available as well.

New student orientation

From 6:30-7:30 p.m., incoming freshmen, new AHS students and their parents are invited to attend. Administrators and counselors will make a brief presentation and make themselves available to answer questions. Parents are encouraged to attend the Aug. 31 event to enter the school for the first time, peruse and watch for updates on the locations of various activities and events.

Support grows for Measure M, elementary school bond

As reported last week, on Aug. 2 the school board placed a $150 million school bond measure on the November ballot designed to rebuild and renovate our local elementary schools.

Since that time, support has been rapidly coalescing around the campaign, which needs to garner 66 percent of the vote to be successful in November. The campaign committee, "For the Children of West County" is being co-chaired by Gary Bell, Richmond City Council, and John Dalrymple, Contra Costa Central Labor Council, and is actively seeking support of all kinds for the campaign effort.

Last week Dion Aroner and Tom Torlakson, members of the California State Assembly representing our school district, endorsed the measure.

On Aug. 22, the Bayside Council PTAs and the El Cerrito Democratic Club also endorsed the bond.

If you would like to add your voice to the campaign, please see the committee's Web site at www.childrenofwestcounty.com. (Many thanks to Castro Elementary teacher and district parent Betty Buginas for volunteering to spend some of her precious summer hours designing the Web site.) Call me at 510-528-1315 if you would like us to mail you a campaign info packet.

El Cerrito, Portola e-mail forum

This coming school year, PTAs at both Portola and El Cerrito High School are working to improve communication between home and school through regular e-mail forums. If you are interested, please e-mail your name and e-mail address to Joann Steck-Bayat, PTA e-mail coordinator, at jsbayat@home.com.

Painting work day at Verde

Saturday, Aug. 26, volunteers will be working to complete exterior painting at Verde Elementary School. Can you spare a little time to help finish this work on Saturday between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.? School starts next Tuesday, and it will be great to welcome back Verde students with a freshly painted school. (Verde Elementary School is in North Richmond at 2000 Giaramita St.)

Back to School!

Hard to believe, but summer is almost over. Administrators and teachers are already hard at work getting their classrooms and programs ready. All district schools except El Cerrito High School begin classes Tuesday, Aug. 29. (El Cerrito High School starts Monday, Aug. 28.) Good luck and best wishes to everyone for a fantastic school year!

workers," she said, adding that the amount of people on vacation may also lower the number that turn in papers.

Sly noted there has been a lot of talk in the community about getting more candidates to challenge the incumbents. "The bottom line is folks are reluctant to take on such a big job," she said.

Jones' concern about accessibility of information has been echoed by many in the community.

Last year brought a slew of changes to Albany schools, between reorganization at the top level of the administration, plenty of new blood in the district and the ongoing construction of the middle school and high school.

An added complication seems to be getting information to residents and teachers alike in a timely fashion.

"This is a community that to a large degree has not felt listened to by the district administration," said Sly. "This will be an important year for (Superintendent) Gary Mills and whoever he brings on to demonstrate whether they're going to be responsive."

Albany resident and father Jacques Berchten agrees that communication is crucial, but he says Mills has worked at improving the situation.

The problem, he contends, is that the district suffers from inadequate tools to spread the word. "We have a terrific superintendent, and it would be a waste to not take advantage of his skills," he said.

An artist and Web developer, Berchten recommends a computer-based "management system that involves teachers and goes all the way down."

The plan is under consideration, he says.

Parent Education PTA committee chairwoman Merry Selk agrees that the bottom line is involving parents, but disagrees that improvements in communication will be rooted in technology.

The trick, she says, is combining timing with results.

"Our focus has been parent inclusion, and the issue is how to better include parents at an earlier stage of decision-making," she said.

One doesn't have to look too far back to find a time when a good number of them didn't feel included in the process. Shortly before the last school year ended, some 100 parents and teachers brought complaints before the board following the district's reorganization that led to the departure of popular director of curriculum and instruction Marianne Camp.

But, Selk added, "I really have to credit Mills for having an open-door policy and developing a lot of committees that invite parents and teachers."

2nd annual Berkeley Music Festival offers something for everyone

By Joaquin McPeek
STAFF WRITER

In a town that prides itself on diversity and culture, it seems only fitting that Berkeley host its own festival to flaunt its distinguished multiculturalism.

The second annual Berkeley Music Festival is one such opportunity that will give the city a chance to relish in a wide variety of activities that inhibit all of the senses from food to music to art.

"We started this in hopes that there could be a space that represented world music, because there's really no representation right now," said Isabel Yrigoyen of the Telegraph Area Association, the organization that puts on the event.

Durant and Telegraph will become a cultural gateway for the one-day festival that will host a variety of the area's best international music.

Led by violinist Anthony Blea, the 10-piece charanga band, Orquestra Charanson, will culminate the day's activities that run from noon to 6 p.m.

Charanga music is steeped in the Afro-Cuban tradition, usually involving string arrangements — in this case, Blea on violin.

Blea began playing violin at the age of 8 and was eventually awarded a scholarship to attend the San Francisco Conservatory of Music at age 11.

After an extensive music education both formally and informally, Blea returned to the Bay Area in search of his proverbial niche.

"I came to the Bay Area, and there was nothing I saw in terms of bands I wanted to join, so I decided to do my own thing," said Blea.

After forming his group in 1995 and relying on clever musical arrangements and unique combinations of Afro-Cuban music, Orquestra Charanson has garnered a reputation of being a band that doesn't play to an empty dance floor.

"There's a certain personality that comes with our music," said Blea.

"This is a very danceable band, and if you don't dance to it, than you're either deaf or paralyzed."

Orquestra Charanson will be joined on stage by the world renowned timbalero Orestes Vilato, who has successfully carved out his spot in modern day Latin music as one of the finest percussionist of our time.

A resume that includes touring stints with Santana and recording sessions with legendary bassist Israel "Cachao" Lopez, vibraphone extraordinaire Bobby Hutcherson, and the incomparable Aretha Franklin are just a few of the musical moments that are a testimony to the respect that Vilato has amassed from the music community throughout his storied career.

Born in Cuba, he has just finished an album with Cuba L.A., a band that combines the talents of other Cubans with music cultivated from the same region.

"The Cuban music fever is coming out of the woodworks, so why not do something with Cubans that live in this country?" he said.

Vilato had previously worked with Blea on other projects, including a musical tribute in honor of Vilato at last year's San Francisco Jazz Festival where Blea was a special guest.

The festival will also be highlighted with appearances by Kotoja, an African roots band that fuses African roots music with pop for what has been described as "African Beat" music.

The popular Easy Bay act, Zydeco Flames, will perform its own brand of Cajun music with a helpful heaping of African American musical influence.

Brazilian singer, dancer and choreographer Lisa Silva will bring an array of traditional samba tunes, which she will perform with her band earlier in the day.

"Berkeley is such a hodge podge of culture, and we really wanted the music to reflect that," said Yrigoyen.

A dance platform has also been added which will showcase a wide variety of dancing styles, including belly dancing, African, and world free form, with the encouragement of audience participation.

Food that ranges from Thai to Mexican, face painting and non-profit organization booths round out the cultural affair.

"We really want to create a feeling of peace and harmony, to get people to dance and to get people to participate," said Yrigoyen.

Admission is free.

IN BRIEF

'As You Like It' set to open

Shotgun Players presents Shakespeare's "As You Like It," opening at 8 p.m., Friday, Sept. 1 at the Julia Morgan Center for the Arts, 2640 College Ave. at Derby, and continuing with free productions at John Hinkel Park in Berkeley.

"Four years ago we decided to go outdoors because the cast of 10 was too large for our basement theatre home at La Val's Subterranean," said a Players spokesperson. "We offered it for free because we couldn't figure out how to collect admission in a public park."

As You Like It was chosen this year because it lends itself to outdoor production. The production's stage will be the bare amphitheater, with the trees as a backdrop.

As with many Shotgun productions, the ensemble is composed of company members and other actors in the community who have worked with the company in the past.

ON THE GREEN: Although Virginia and Acton streets mark the Greenway's official Berkeley edge, the Peralta Community Garden — where yardless residents can till a patch of soil for a nominal fee —is a worthy landmark for start or finish. Viewing hours for the garden, at Hopkins and Peralta avenues, are very limited, but if a resident is cultivating his or her square footage when you happen upon the area, you're welcome to browse.

The end of the world, at least for some former residents, lies east on El Cerrito's Fairmount Avenue, which climbs to Sunset View Cemetery in Kensington. The view from there encompasses three bridges, red-topped roofs and blue waters. Also in El Cerrito, Moeser Lane borders Cerrito Vista Park and the Hillside Natural Area.

URBAN DETOURS: If you're feeling confident to navigate busy city sidewalks, the Greenway intersects many shopping neighborhoods. OBITUARY

Joan M. Cohn

Joan M. Cohn, a respected Oakland school teacher and advocate of environmental education, died Aug. 14 in Oakland. She was 77 and had suffered from Parkinson's disease for more than two decades.

A longtime resident of Berkeley, Cohn taught at Golden Gate, Crocker Highlands and Lazear elementary schools from 1968 until illness forced her retirement in 1982. She believed in nurturing the individual talents and interests of her students.

"She was a superb teacher," said Walt Rowson, former principal at Golden Gate. "She was a theorist who was not afraid to try new things but kept the best of the old."

Wanting to introduce inner-city youngsters to the wilderness, she secured a grant and took dozens of children from Golden Gate School in the early 1970s to Oakland's Feather River Family Camp near Quincy.

Other grants helped to create a toy-lending library at the school and enabled low-income families to take out-of-town excursions to experience snow, the beach, and a farm.

She was an active member of a program called OWL (Outdoor Ways of Learning) that encouraged outdoor education for Oakland students. One of her favorite teaching tools was the solar oven, which she constructed and used with many of her students. After her retirement, Cohn continued to volunteer at Lazear School and later helped at an after-school tutoring program in West Oakland called SU House. With colleague Dave Elliott, she co-authored a book called "Recycling for Math."

A native of New York City, Cohn received a bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan in 1944. She is survived by her husband of 57 years, Sig Cohn of Berkeley; her children, Chris of Moraga, Rusty of Albany, Abby of Piedmont, and Eric of Hood River, Ore.; and seven grandchildren.

A memorial service celebrating Cohn's life will be scheduled at a later date. Those wishing to make a donation in her honor may send contributions to the Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research, 840 Third St., Santa Rosa, CA 95494.

In a separate part of the settlement, the City Council earlier this week voted to end a development agreement between Ladbroke and the city, a step more symbolic than practical since Ladbroke sold the track to Magna International, Inc. of Canada last year.

Magna, owned by auto parts mogul Frank Stronach, had no interest in adding a card club to the track.

"I'm very glad the whole darn thing is over," said Councilman Bob Good. "It's been a mess from the beginning."

Good said he was particularly relieved that the city wasn't responsible for any settlement fees. Ladbroke had agreed to cover the costs.

"That's a real load off everyone's mind," he said.

The legal fight began when the citizens group charged the city with several violations in the way it presented the ballot measure. It said the city should have required an environmental review of the plan before striking a development agreement with Ladbroke. The city argued it could do the review after the agreement was made.

The group also said language used in the measure was biased because it said the project would benefit the city by creating jobs.

A lower court tossed out the suit, but the group appealed. In 1998, an appellate court upheld these two claims and sent the case back to Superior Court.

Wednesday's settlement closes the matter, which Outis considers a legal victory because appellate rulings are precedent-setting.

"At a minimum it says you can't put a government-sponsored development agreement on the ballot without conducting an (environmental review) first," he said.

Ladbroke attorney Steven Johnson wouldn't comment on the case, except to say the settlement, which took about two months to reach, was consensual.

Robert Zweben, Albany city attorney, said he's not sure how much legal impact the appellate rulings will have since it's impossible to know how things would have ended if the lower court would have ruled again. "There are some significant questions left unanswered."

Still, Zweben said he is glad the settlement was reached. "In many ways it's good to have it finally over."

Arkin also took the meeting as an opportunity to apologize for negative comments he made throughout the lawsuit.

mind-numbing choice of eateries.

El Cerrito offers up El Cerrito Plaza and Target. The Fairmont Avenue block right below Kensington's Sunset View Cemetery has a few cool shops and two eateries: One is the stalwart American fare at Fatapple's; the second I hesitate to mention because it's a tiny Japanese restaurant with the white-bearded owner doing all the slicing and cooking. If you are willing to wait forever, the rewards comes in delicate tempura or fresh sashimi. As for the name ... well, you'll have find that out for yourself.

UP A CREEK: Groups like the Friends of Five Creeks and Sustainable El Cerrito have helped restore, clean up and maintain the areas around the Ohlone Greenway and where Codornices and Cerrito creeks cross underfoot. The Friends post a volunteer schedule at www.best.com/%7Ealcock/keith/creeks, while the El Cerrito group chairperson can be reached at 510-232-6466.

Trafficking in safety: The Greenway does cross regular streets. While the pathway has red stop signs, the vehicular traffic often does not, so be sure to look both ways. As for being an overlooked hazard on the roadway, my instincts had been correct. Bicyclists whooshed around me and nobody — except for one homeless man saying something about getting a leg up — looked twice.

I didn't do too badly; then again, the pathway elevation is so uniform that I couldn't quite build up enough speed to coast along. But, I never didn't need to use any of the occasional benches along the route, or sprawl on the wider grass borders at the Albany/Berkeley side. It's a good place to get away from your own folly.

DETAILS, DETAILS: The Greenway can be accessed from several exits off Highway 80 from Gilman Street to MacDonald Avenue. The easiest access is at the El Cerrito Plaza or El Cerrito Del Norte BART stations on the Richmond line.

County, is a serious undertaking. The oaks are some of the most picturesque trees on the site, and on the Cloyne Court site abutting. The oaks lend beauty and charm to the natural and manmade landscape, enhancing the value of property by 30 percent, and adding to the distinctive and unique character of the Berkeley area (in which they are indigenous). Damage to the root system or other parts of the tree may occur by operation of equipment or machinery, or by paving, changing the natural grade, trenching or excavating within the protected zone of an oak tree.

"Protected zone" shall mean that area within the drip-line of an oak tree and extending there from to a point at least five feet outside the drip line, or 15 feet from the trunks of a tree, whichever distance is greater. A plan for protecting oak trees on the site during and after development shall include the following:

1— That the trees on the site plan be physically identified by number on a tag affixed to the north side of the tree in a manner preserving the health and viability of the tree.

2— Identification of those trees shown on the site plan which may be classified as heritage oak trees. Heritage oak trees are either of the following: any oak tree measuring 36 inches or more in diameter measured four and one-half feet above the natural grade; a tree having significant historical cultural importance to the community, notwithstanding that the tree diameter is less than 36 inches. One tree measuring 50 inches which fronted Le Roy Avenue is al-

'Bert' Miller has led a varied and very interesting life

Community Folk

By Clara-Rae Genser

We were sitting in the Cape Cod Restaurant on Solano, having lunch and chatting, as we often do, about our many activities, our children and their children, when I suddenly realized that this very attractive woman sitting across from me, this woman I had known and delighted in for so many years, had as interesting a life as anyone I had ever written about. So I borrowed a pen from her, and the still-clean place mat from under my plate, and started taking notes. It wasn't an ideal way to do an interview. At one point I even strayed onto the tablecloth (I do hope they were able to get the ink out). But it was fun, and when we finally raised our heads and looked around we realized the owners were having coffee waiting for us to depart.

Let me tell you about Bert (her name is actually Bertha, but no one has ever heard her call her that, or ever will).

If you're a little-theater fan you may have seen her in one of the many little theaters she works with. The Masquers at Point Richmond, of course. But also the Dramateurs in Orinda and others. During its heyday she was active in the Oakland Civic Theater. The play in which she is currently appearing is "Arsenic and Old Lace" in Orinda. And her husband, Don, is making his debut in that play as one of the "gentlemen" murderees.

She sings, too, and she has been singing with the Berkeley Women's Chorus for many years — except when she and Don are in Chicago, or Geneva, or Florida, of course. She also sings with other groups, such as a group of faculty wives. But this is piecemeal, and there is so much more. There is Bert the mother, and now Bert the grandmother, and Bert the worker, and — central to all of these — Bert the wife. And, of course, Bert the friend.

My earliest notes on the place mat are almost illegible, but let's see. . . . She was born in Schenectady, N.Y., and went to school there. That is where she met and married Don Miller. His life takes center stage at this point, for it decided the way they would go. Don had gone to Harvard on the GI Bill and scholarships after he got out of the Army. His career was in experimental physics. Harvard did not have the facilities he needed for the work he was doing, so Harvard farmed him out to the General Electric Research Lab in Schenectady. In a by-the-way, Bert explained that after the war they decentralized General Electric, and Schenectady "became a ghost town."

Bert and Don met at a dance held by the G.E. Women's Club. They married and he built a house from scratch. A beautiful house. A group of engineers had bought land in a pretty area of the city. Their house was built on a lot on that land. Of course, when the house was finished and they moved in, there was no water. And no sewer. Bert spoke of a very long extension cord from one house and a very long hose from another. "Everyone helped everyone else. It was a great experience."

And, by the time the house was finished and they moved in, they were a family. Linda had been born

There was a short stint in Brookhaven, Long Island; then Don was offered a job in the lab here, and they came to California. Don was part of Louis Alvarez's group here. I have written about Louis Alvarez and his wonderful work and the many very talented people who worked with him. But Don had a split assignment, working both in the lab here and with Northwestern University in Illinois. They were building the Fermi Lab outside of Chicago at the time. He also became involved in experiments with the International Lab in Geneva, Switzerland. So they moved about a lot. Half a year in Illinois, half in Berkeley, with months spent in Geneva; and traveling to other fascinating places where Don was speaking or reading papers.

The family had grown by now. Robert and Joni had joined Linda. And it was at about this time that they read about a program being started in Berkeley making it possible for people to adopt Indian babies (this was before they called them Native American). They were interested and thought they might look into it. So Katrina, and then Michael, joined the family.

During all of this — children, moving, making homes in many places — Bert maintained the interest she had begun in Schenectady. She had learned a lot about theater when she took part in shows at Union College and at the Schenectady Civic Theater. In Chicago she worked with the all-male Loyola Seminary College. They gave plays in the Theater on the Lake every summer. They also had little theater in the parks. Then, of course, in California it was the Masquers, and the Dramateurs, etc. She has done everything in little theater, from acting to set-building and costume-sewing.

All this while, Don has enjoyed himself by remodeling and repairing the many homes they have owned in the various places they've lived. And the children have grown up and produced grandchildren: Linda, one Robert, two; Joni, one, and Katrina, one. They spend part of the year in their new, lovely home in the Marina area of Richmond and part of the year in their condominium in Florida. And they continue their very busy lives. Bert takes time out on Thursday when she and Theo Collins and I have lunch and share our lives with each other. And it is good.

This was fun. Maybe I will sit across from you one day and decide you are to be my next subject. Could be. Anyway, I do want your input: interesting people, etc.

Please write to me at 555 Pierce St #443, Albany, CA 94706, or call 525-4585. My e-mail address is crgenser@aol.com

Berkeley 1900

By Richard Schwartz

Berkeley was not always a progressive town. There was a day when police and judges were paid for every "hobo" they locked up.

The good old days also had their share of crimes, even ones we might not think of as occurring in that day.

When Marshall Vollmer took command of the Police force in 1905 (he previously was a Berkeley mailman) he instigated organization and changes (especially scientific and record keeping) that would draw the attention of the entire nation's law enforcement which would follow his lead.

Article after article reveal him as a fair and caring man. It is said he once walked a drunk home instead of arresting him because his family couldn't afford to have him miss a day of work.

Richard Schwartz's new book, 'Berkeley 1900, Daily Life at the Turn of the Century,' a snapshot of daily life 100 years ago as described in the pages of the Berkeley Daily Gazette, is available at Berkeley bookstores.

Jack the Hugger.

Unknown Man Makes an Attack Upon Ladies.

Some man with an irresistible desire to hug women has caused such a fright among the gentler sex in this city that no one dares to venture out after dark witohut masculine protection. The strange individual has always contented himself with a mild embrace and then retreated as rapidly as the frightened [illegible].

On three or four occasions several young ladies together were accosted by the hugger. He caught one of them in his arms, but fled, frightened by their screams. His attacks are generally made between 7 and 10 o'clock in the neighborhood of Channing way, Bowditch and Ellsworth streets. The first appearance of this persistent hugger was made about two months ago on Bowditch street, when Mrs. Douglas Keith was attacked. Mrs. Keith succeeded in frightening the rascal away, but he has kept up his work from time to time ever since.

Great difficulty is found in getting a description of the man. The women hugged are generally too badly frightened to notice what the man looks like. Others object to the notoriety that would follow his identification and refuse to tell of the affair. In several cases which have been brought to the notice of the Marshal and his deputies the women have declined to give any satisfactory information. The descriptions given by those who are willing to talk have been so vague and of such varieties that the officers have been unable to locate the man.

Marshal Richard Lloyd will not give the names of the huggers' victims.

POLICE PHONE SYSTEM

Acting upon the recommendation of the Police committee, the Trustees decided last night to establish a police alarm system, and a contract was entered into with the Signal Alarm Company of Milwaukee to immediately put in the system to consist of twenty alarm boxes for three years, provided the necessary right of way can be secured over telegraph and telephone poles. The contract with the company provides that the Milwaukee firm shall place the system at its own expense For the first three years the city will pay a monthly rental of not less than $70 with the option to purchase the system outright within a period of three years for a sum in the neighborhood of $3500

C. E. Wood, a representative of the Signal Alarm Company appeared before the board and explained the working of the police alarm box. A box was exhibited before the members of the board and the manner of its operation, its many advantages over similar contrivances and its great durability were thoroughly explained by Wood The system, he said, was capable of recording a call in three seconds, and was built to withstand rough treatment and practically indestructible as it contains no magnets and is almost entirely mechanical.

The Trustees inspected the alarm box with great interest and when the motion to adopt the report of the committee recommending the installation of the police alarm system, it was carried unanimously. Another motion was made by Trustee Hoff to the effect that the board enter into a contract with the alarm company to establish the system of twenty boxes for a monthly rental of not more than $70 with the option to purchase the system within three years for an amount in the neighborhood of $3500 The motion was carried unanimously

Marshal Vollmer will immediately map out the town and settle upon the location of the alarm boxes, with a view to having the system installed as soon as possible

SERIOUS CHARGE MADE AGAINST WEST END MAN

August Wiesenhavern of 1328 Sixth street, West Berkeley was arrested yesterday by Policemen Lestrange and Farrar on a charge of indecent exposure. He was arrested February 4, 1902, on a similar charge but was acquited. Wiesenhavern had been placed in the County Jail.

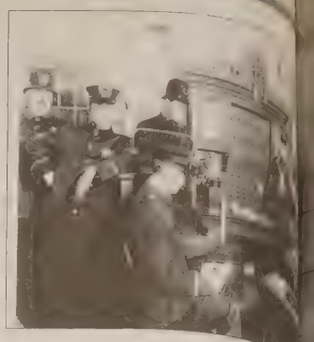

GATHER IN THE HOBOES

Eleven hoboes were arrested in West Berkeley Monday night by Deputy Constables George White and Joseph Taylor and taken to the County Jail.

The arrests were due to the fact that the Appellate Court has decided that the salary system for the payment of justices of the peace and constables is unconstitutional.

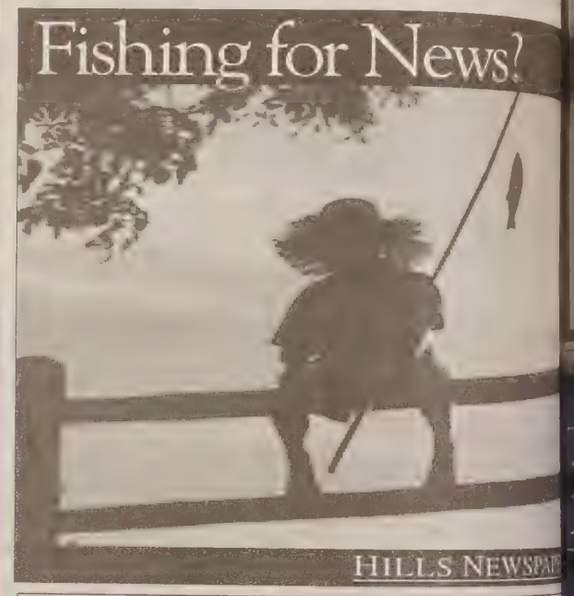

The decision of the Appellant Court is likely to be tested in the Supreme Court, which has once held the salary law to be constitutional, but the deputy constables are taking time by the forelock in making arrests, so that if the fee system is restored they will be entitled to compensation.

Under the fee custom the County Jail was always crowded with tramps and hoboes, while under the salary system very few vagrants were arrested. The fees of arresting officers are about $2 and justices of the peace $3 for each vagrant taken into custody and committed to the County Jail.

Soaring spaces with breathtaking views

WELLS & BENNETT

The owners of 5940 Buena Vista in Oakland weren't actually looking to buy a home when they first walked onto the property during a Sunday open house in 1996. They already owned a home in Oakland's Lincoln Heights neighborhood, and had just extensively remodeled their kitchen. They were planning on remodeling a bathroom, and didn't anticipate buying a larger home for another year or so. But one look at the exceptional quality and artistic unity of the Buena Vista property changed their minds.

David Stark Wilson of the award-winning firm of Wilson Associates had designed the 3,100-plus-square-foot, five-bedroom, three-bath home. He designed the home to fit the site, taking advantage of the expansive San Francisco Bay views and the southwestern light.

Color, dramatic shapes, and a rigorous repetition of copper wall sconces, poured concrete fireplace hearths and tall, elegant Blomberg metal frame doors and windows define the homes soaring spaces. The home's large expanse of unbroken, hand-plastered walls makes this a wonderful place for displaying an art collection.

Along with the superb bay views and the stunning impact of the design, Wilson's consistent excellence and his attention to detail entranced the owners:

- maple kitchen cabinets,
- custom-made solid-maple interior doors and windowsills,
- the master bath's marble countertops match the kitchen's
- the downstairs' bath striking slate-and-glass freestanding shower
- custom-designed towel bars.

The owners have found the home immensely practical and livable. is Wilson's design sets apart the living room with its floor-to-ceiling fireplace and views for formal entertaining. Square columns define the dining room, which flows easily through tall glass doors to both the rear patio and front terrace.

The kitchen-family combination room, with its own fireplace, has access to the patio and terrace and San Francisco and Golden Gate views. The bedroom and bath on the main floor make an excellent private guest space or quiet office location.

Two bedrooms with vaulted ceilings and a marble and maple bath grace the upstairs west wing. The east wing houses the laundry room, a third bedroom and the master bedroom suite. Wilson has placed the master bedroom, with its walk-in closet and marble and granite bath with double sinks, Jacuzzi and glass shower, to provide San Francisco and Golden Gate views.

The owners engaged Gary Lazar Landscape Design, winner of the California Landscape Contractor's Association 1997 award in the best design/build category, to undertake a major landscaping project, planting the upslope lot with California native plants and providing walking paths and seating areas, which lead to top of the property with its panoramic view.

They also added a level, grassy children's play area to the east side.

The home at 5940 Buena Vista is currently on the market for $1,195,000. For more information, call Stan or Sharon Hammond at Wells & Bennett Realtors 510-531-7000.

How do I get preapproved for a mortgage?

Real Estate Forum

By Dian Hymer

Years ago buyers didn't worry about financing their home purchase until after they found the home they wanted to buy. Once they had an accepted offer, they'd shop around for a week or so and then submit a loan application.

The recent low inventory of homes for sale has made home buying highly competitive in some areas.

In order to compete, many buyers are now getting preapproved for the mortgage they need to complete the purchase — often before they even start looking at homes to buy.

There are two parts to a mortgage approval: approval of the borrower and approval of the property.

Mortgage preapproval is a process whereby the borrower is approved for a mortgage of a certain amount. The approval is usually good for a period of time and is subject only to the borrower finding an acceptable property. An acceptable property is one with a satisfactory appraisal and a title report that indicates that the seller is able to transfer clear title to the property to the buyer. Final mortgage approval also requires a purchase agreement that is signed by the buyer and seller.

To get preapproved, talk to a lender or mortgage broker and fill out a loan application. You will need to provide verifications of your employment and the source of your cash for the down payment and closing costs. Employment can be verified with copies of paycheck stubs, W-2's or tax returns if you're self-employed.

A mortgage broker with years of experience may be willing to write a preapproval letter for you without first receiving lender underwriting approval.

You'll also need to give authorization to have your credit checked.

One of the benefits of being preapproval is that you know exactly how much you can afford to pay for a home before you enter into a purchase agreement.

Another benefit is that you'll be in a better position to negotiate with a home seller.

A solid preapproval letter from a lender should remove any concerns the seller has about your financial capabilities.

Before you make an offer, make sure that your preapproval letter isn't simply a glorified prequalification letter. A prequalification letter simply states that the lender is likely to give you a loan of a certain amount if the financial data you've disclosed to the lender is satisfactorily verified.

With prequalifiction, the lender doesn't have to give you a loan if your financial and credit documentation doesn't pass the scrutiny of the lender's underwriter.

Recently buyers received a letter from their lender that had the word preapproval typed at the top. Without first reading the letter, they included it with their purchase offer in the hopes of strengthening their offer.

The seller's agent read the letter and discovered that the preapproval was conditioned upon the lender verifying the buyer's credit report, source of down payment funds and employment history.

The letter was far from being a firm commitment from the lender to give the buyers the mortgage they needed to complete the purchase. Be aware that mortgage brokers aren't lenders. They are middlemen who broker loans to lenders.

A mortgage broker with years of experience may be willing to write a preapproval letter for you without first receiving lender underwriting approval.

But, if there is anything unusual about your loan application like bad credit history, borrowed down payment money or short-term employment, make sure your mortgage broker has a lender's underwriter review your package before issuing a preapproval letter.

You may not need to include a financing contingency in your purchase offer if you have unconditional lender preapproval. However, you may want to include a contingency for the property to appraise for the purchase price.

More paint manufacturers are providing lifetime guarantees

By Gene Austin
KNIGHT RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

The proliferation of new house paints with "lifetime" guarantees should give new confidence to the armies of do-it-yourselfers who have grown accustomed to repainting every few years.

If the new paints are as good as manufacturers say they are, painters will literally embark on a new era. Conventional paint problems like dirt and chalk (old, powdered paint) on the surface, glossy surfaces and even moisture (the leading cause of paint peeling) could no longer be things to worry about.

Among paints that carry a lifetime warranty (often defined in the fine print as a warranty that lasts as long as you live in the home where the paint was used) are Weatherbeater Ultra by Sears, Duration by Sherwin-Williams, Behr Premium Plus by Home Depot, Valspar American Tradition by Lowe's and Thompson's House & Trim Paint. Call 800-367-6297 for dealers.

Some of the lifetime paints sell for premium prices, compared with $10 to $20 per gallon for conventional paints that have less optimistic warranties. For example, Weatherbeater Ultra sells for about $28 a gallon, Duration for about $36.

Of course, it will take some time to determine whether the guarantees really hold up or whether we are still dealing with paint that peels, chips and cracks in something less than a lifetime. But the prospects are exciting.

For example, Sears contends that Weatherbeater Ultra can be applied over previously painted surfaces that are "chalky, dirty or glossy, without the need to clean, wash or sand the surface." That could eliminate much of the time-consuming surface preparation that has always been part of painting.

Bob Young, Sears spokesman, said the secret to Weatherbeater Ultra's durability is a "rich, polyurethane-added Superbond formula."

Thompson's spokeswoman, Victoria Varley, said Thompson's House & Trim Paint resists moisture-related peeling, blistering and flaking. The paint "prevents exterior moisture from penetrating the paint film, while allowing interior water vapor, caused by showers, cooking and other activities, to escape," she said. "The bond between the paint and the substrate remains intact, greatly reducing breaks in the surface."

Consumers should study warranties and directions carefully before buying lifetime paints (or any other paint, for that matter). Those who don't have sharp eyesight should take along a magnifying glass, because the fine print on paint cans, where warranty details are spelled out, can be very fine.

In most cases, you'll be told that you'll need the receipt to make a claim under the paint's warranty. You'll also learn that the manufacturer's liability is probably limited to the cost or replacement of the paint. The labor of preparing the surface and applying the paint is not covered.

Consumers also need to understand what needs to be done to fulfill the requirements of the warranty. It may be that a certain primer is required, or a certain spread rate or specific number of coats. The warranty also may cover only certain problems, such as peeling. Mildew or color retention often aren't covered.

There might be other caveats that should be noted. For example, while Sears says Weatherbeater Ultra can be used over old paint with little or no preparation, the Ultra warranty doesn't apply if the underlying paint fails and peels off, taking the Ultra with it.

Top-quality paints such as the lifetime paints will survive longest on new construction, where the surface being painted is in good condition and correct primers will be used.

To best take advantage of the new long-time warranties, keep a record of what was painted with a new paint — the siding, back porch, window frames or whatever. Staple or clip the list to the sales receipt of the paint. If problems develop, take a few pictures of the damage and take all records to the dealer to claim a refund or replacement paint.

Discovering strange and secret treasures

...to number 181 in true ex-...s from February 1997

...though my mother died almost ... months ago, Anet and I are still ... on cleaning out her house ... Co...lto. We go there as often as ... a couple of times a month ... sort and pack.

...s a little house. There really isn't ... in it and yet, it seems like so ... In someways it makes me feel ... to go through my mother's ... and take care of them.

"Bring them home to use or give ... to friends and family. In another way, I know that I'm reluctant to finish the job, to make her home ... she made it vanish from view. Often when we are there, I find something that I want to ask my mom about. "Where did this come from? I've never seen it before," I want to say. Oh. "Mom, I can't believe you saved this all of these years."

A funny thing happened this week while we were at my mom's going through quilting supplies, vacation scrapbooks and plant food in the garage. We came across a large plastic garbage can with a lid. Inside, neatly packaged, were disaster supplies, a very complete kit. Sweaters, shoes, extra shoes and socks. Bandaids, Tums, antibiotic cream and Advil, all carefully wrapped. Canned goods, a tiny can opener, bottled water. Portable radio and batteries, separately packaged.

It looked as if she had followed a recommended list to the letter, then added a few things more. A pair of scissors, eating utensils and cup, plastic containers, even twine and rubber bands.Anet said, "Well, obviously [illegible] was where we should have planned to go when disaster struck. She was prepared to take care of herself and several others, too."

Money, toilet paper, Kleenex. Comb, mirror, soap. Candles and matches. It went on and on. Down at the bottom, wrapped in plastic, Anet found a tablet of paper, pen and pencils and — this is what was so funny — a song sheet.

"A song sheet?" I asked, not believing it. Anet was laughing so hard, she couldn't answer. I tried again, "What kind of song sheet?"

"Good old Alice," Anet gasped. "How I loved her. There's only one song here, and guess what it is? 'Oh, dear, what can the matter be?' — several verses. Can't you just see her leading the neighbors in song?" We both collapsed in giggles.

I want to call up my mother, ask her, "Mom, how come you included 'Oh, dear, what can the matter be?' in your disaster kit?" I want to say, "Were you planning on cheering up the troops? I can't call her, so I called my friend, Karin, instead. Not long ago, Karin and her brother and sisters cleaned out their family home after their mother died.

I wanted to know if they'd found surprises, things they wanted to ask their mother about. Also, I wanted to review with Karin how they had managed to live through and complete the clearing of the house, then selling it.

Theirs was rather a more complicated project because the house was in Illinois, but the children lived in California, North Carolina and Kansas City. Except one. Karin's sister, Mary, lives in Illinois about an hour away from the house.

"We call her Saint Mary," Karin said. "We couldn't have done any of it without her."

It's a big house, Victorian, three stories, 13 rooms on an acre of land, plus a three-story barn. The family had lived there for 54 years, and during all of that time, they had accumulated furnishings and belongings: books and tools and linens and all the things that people bring home — for all that time

When Karin's mother died, the children, spouses, and grandchildren went home to attend to things. They went through the house, sorted, packed and shipped boxes back to their 14 different households. They accomplished this herculean task in a single week, the only time they were all able to spare.

"There were no squabbles over anything," Karin says. "Everybody had a different eye. Those of us who had grown up with the oriental rugs, carved and overstuffed furniture tend toward a more minimalist decor. But our children loved the gooey stuff, so they got it. It worked wonderfully well."

"Mom, how come you included 'Oh, dear, what can the matter be?' in your disaster kit?"

True Experiences

By Tarpoff and Talbert

But how did they deal with the sheer volume? "Mary made an inventory. We each chose what we wanted. We got a dumpster and threw away tons

"We laid out seemingly thousands of items on tables and the antique dealers came. We donated to the historical society, the library, the thrift shop. We gave 50 outfits to the local opera company for costumes

"We sent aunts from out of town to the house after the funeral to take a pick —often something handmade, an embroidered tablecloth or two

"We divided up thousands of loose photographs and many albums, records, tapes, videos among ourselves. The people who bought the house wanted some things." And, anytime Mary said she wanted something, we said, 'It's yours'

Did they find any surprises? Yes, they did. A mysterious bag of dirt in a plastic bag in the barn. Not potting soil, just dirt. Why was it there?

New Real Estate Program can reduce fees and commissions by 50%

BAY AREA - www.Homes-Link.com a real estate company based in Alameda CA has developed a revolutionary concept in real estate sales called Open Listings which is guaranteed to save home sellers 50% of the normal Real Estate commission while meeting all California Department of Real Estate rules and standards. The concept is so revolutionary that it has the larger franchise based companies up in arms and scrambling [illegible] ways to combat it. This program even out-discounts Costco, the king of discounts. For example: Costco's discount on the sale of a home priced from $200,000 to $224,000 is $1,775 while Homes-Link will save the same homeowner from $6,000 TO $6,749.97. On a home priced between $300,000 and $349,999, Costco's savings is $2,800 and at Homes-Link the savings grows to $9,000-$10,499.97. The savings continue to go up from there. The program is deceptively simple. Sellers work along side their realtor® in a partnership based program. The program is fee for [illegible] a flat 6% commission as is charged by conventional real estate companies. By using a fee for service based program, smart sellers, in today's market, are enjoying sales prices in many cases over asking price in surprisingly quick order. This simple, easy to understand, program has saved hundreds of home-sellers thousands of dollars in unnecessary real estate commissions, while allowing them additional dollars for their next purchase or for their retirement plans.

The Open Listing program has received rave reviews from scores of happy and satisfied clients throughout [illegible]

Trust: a two-way street

What You Don't Know Can Hurt You

By Don Dunning

In life, we all need to trust those who are expert in areas we are not. Real estate agents require the confidence of their clients. Likewise, Realtors must believe in their buyers and sellers. When there is no trust, a real estate transaction can become a poisonous affair for all parties.

One of an agent's most important functions is to interpret what is happening in the market. Pricing a home is complicated; not everyone can do it well.

Being too kind

An experienced, local agent, whom I know and have confidence in, told me of her nightmare. For the past several months, she has been working with a seller to get the home ready for marketing. This was a personal referral from a previous client.

It is a property with extensive deferred maintenance. The agent arranged for a pest control report, hauling of debris, carpet cleaning, plumbing repairs, painting, weeding, cleaning and staging with furniture. She even loaned the seller $3,000 from her own funds for this process. Many hours of her time were spent not just supervising, but also working on the house.

Before the seller signed the listing, the agent had carefully reviewed comparable sales and explained how all the problems would impact value. She suggested an asking price commensurate with the condition she anticipated after it was clean and free of debris.

Now that the home has been spiffed up, the seller has told the agent that two relatives, neither of whom live in the area, think it has been under-listed by more than $100,000. The agent provided comparable sales, including a home next door, to these two inquisitors. This did not change their opinion; they want the seller to list high and expect her to receive even higher offers. The agent, who is knowledgeable and professional, is certain this is not feasible.

Although her relatives lack confidence in the agent, the seller has decided to go ahead and put the house on the market. If the agent gives back the listing, she does not think she will be reimbursed for the $3,000; if she markets it for her suggested price, she doubts they will accept anything less than the high price they have in mind. If she lists at the inflated price, she does not feel it has any chance to sell. This agent, who went so far and above the call of duty, is in a no-win situation.

Whose reality do we accept?

Several weeks ago, I returned a listing to unrealistic sellers for similar reasons. The sellers reside overseas; they have not lived in their Montclair home for almost 10 years. Despite this, during a short visit to the Bay area, we met and they told me what they felt the property was worth.

Their price opinion was based on closed sales of neighborhood homes they had never seen. I responded that I considered their property to be a fixer; the comparables they cited were houses in top condition. I suggested we get comprehensive inspections and then discuss it again.

Several months, and numerous reports and bids later, we had the necessary information. Problems, including serious foundation repair, furnace and roof replacement, and substantial pest control, total over $43,000. This is not to mention other maintenance and repair issues, as well as the need for extensive remodeling.

Another consideration is that buyers usually have their own, independent inspections. When widespread work is required, it is common for buyers to come up with higher bids and to ask the seller to pay for some or all of the additional cost. If, however, a well-priced listing engenders multiple offers, the buyer's renegotiating leverage is minimized or eliminated.

With all this in mind, I gave the sellers a variety of marketing strategies for an "As Is" sale. My recommendation was to list at an attractive price to diminish the As Is stigma. Faced with the sellers' reluctance to take this option, I offered to list at a price $50,000 higher, although I made it clear this would not be the best tactic.

Disregarding my advice and the three sets of comparable sales I had supplied, the sellers instructed me to list at $90,000 more than my original proposal. Worst of all, they reiterated their expectation of getting an offer of $60,000 to $70,000 over their already elevated asking price.

I explained that the definition of a seller is someone who has a need to sell and is willing to accept the price verdict of the market. I told them it would be better for them to work with another agent, and I released them from the listing.

Even though I spent about 20 hours for which I will never be paid, I feel relieved.

Final thoughts

You may ask, how can I trust an agent I really do not know? The truth is, we take this risk all the time. How well did you know your doctor, dentist, lawyer, tax accountant or car mechanic at the beginning? At some point, we have all been in the position of letting go and putting ourselves in someone else's hands.

Nevertheless, when choosing a real estate agent you certainly want experience, competence and caring. Before you commit to working with a particular Realtor, ask a lot of questions and make sure there is mutual trust and respect. A team feeling is always preferable to a tug-of-war.

Residential real estate is more a business of relationships than selling houses. Without solid rapport, a satisfying outcome is a long shot.

A home way ahead of its time

In the 1940s, Oakland Schools maintenance supervisor and jack-of-all trades Bert Trubody bought some lots on Altura Place in Oakland's Leona Heights District.

He planned to build a series of homes, which could be sold and provide income. He lived in one house while building another — all "vernacular, clapboard, farmhouse types." But 7415 Altura was to be his last house, his family's permanent home, and his masterpiece.

He took a course on design at the University of California's Extension, and made a small model.

In the late 1950s, he designed an efficient, passive solar house a home way ahead of its time. The Eichler house — a gable roofed house, honest in structure, with an "oriental flavor" — was all the rage. The home at 7415 Altura has been called "a Neolithic Eichler.".

But unlike Eichler, Trubody was a "Yankee tinkerer" and "a steel and concrete man" who engineered and built superbly.

When the present owner purchased the home in 1980, he upgraded the bathroom, added a second, and, over the next 20 years, upgrades the home's amenities, making it far more luxurious.

In 1989 a he enclosed the deck to make a large solarium. In 1994, he turned part of the lower level into apartment. The owner did much of the work himself, employing the best trades- and craftspersons he could find for plumbing, electrical and major structural additions.

Trubody used his extensive building skills and available natural materials to enormous advantage in building the house. Now, over 40 years the house has never had any termite or rot damage, rain or ground water seepage, or settlement of any kind. The present owner has increased this structural integrity

Foundation: Poured 6" concrete walls and slab — heavily steel reinforced. The entire outside of the foundation was fiberglassed and sealed against moisture. A French drain was installed at the north (uphill) wall as additional insurance.

Structure: The entire lower level, now an apartment and garage, was clear space, so that Trubody could drive his Model T Ford collection in, work on them, and drive them out the other side (where the apartment garden window is now).

To accomplish this, he supported the upper story on massive steel beams resting (on the uphill side) on concrete pilasters poured as part of the foundation.

The beams are resting on and welded to steel lally columns at the downhill side. Floor joists are 2x12s, connected to the steel beams. The upper level is built on 4x4 - four foot modules, with standard 16" joist spacing. Rafters are 4 x 10 fir which by today's standards would qualify as "select-structural" grade. They are on 5' centers.

All the supporting 4x4 columns are pinned to the rafters with two 12" lengths of rebar extending 6" down into the post and 6" up into the rafter. Rafters and posts are tied together over the ridge line with 2" wide, heavy steel straps extending down the rafters for some distance.

Roof: In 1996 the tar and gravel roofing was replaced by a rubber torchdown roof, creating a single, rubberized membrane with a 40 year estimated life. After curing it was coated with the prescribed white reflective coating, and re-coated this year.

Roof Deck ("ceiling"): Redwood groves often surround or abut groves of pecky cedar. Trubody often worked at Oakland's Sierra Family Camp where loggers had come upon a redwood grove that abutted some pecky. He secured the trees, trucked them down to the site, and built a mill. Thus the 4" thick pecky cedar roof decking, which is cross-sections of the trees. Some boards are almost 2' wide.

Siding: Both upper and lower levels have 1X 6 diagonal sheathing. The upper level has full dimension 1x12, resawn, first growth redwood board-and-batten siding. Clapboard siding was used on the lower level (south and west sides) It has been covered with 3/8" clear cedar resawn plywood and redwood battens. The original board-and-batten and new siding are indistinguishable.

Where had it come from? No one knows. Their Swedish grandparents' wedding clothes. Black frock coat and trousers, stiff white collar; high-necked white lace dress.

They recognized the clothes because they'd seen them all of their lives in a gilt-framed wedding portrait hanging in the house.

And probably the most valuable and surprising find of all —original Walt Disney drawings, paper cartoon strips.

In a suitcase in the attic storage room, apparently packed away in the 1930s,were Mickey, Ferdinand the Bull, Pinocchio.

"Our folks didn't even let us go to the movies," Karin says.

"They certainly weren't Disney fans. We couldn't imagine how they had come to own these strips."

It hadn't occurred to the finders that the strips might be valuable.

They simply wanted to know why there were there. And then they realized why.

The Swedish grandparents had a dear friend, a man named Louis Nader.

Every Sunday, Louis Nader, a local banker, went to dinner at the grandparents' farm.

He dressed elegantly, always wore a fedora, was a fascination to the children.

Louise Nader had another friend, they remembered now —Walt Disney. The strips must have been a Sunday dinner gift.

A look at predatory lending

Mortgage Madness

By Karen Senzig

In the early 1990s, horrible stories arose: low income and elderly homeowners were losing their homes because they could not make payments on high interest mortgage loans made by unscrupulous lenders.

Known in the industry as "predatory lending practice," these lenders were accused of seeking out borrowers in drastic situations who had the leastability to repay and foreclosing and seizing title to the property well below market values.

It should be noted, however, that many private money lenders (sometimes known as hard-money lenders) were the only solution for some people in temporary financial straits.

"We provided a financial Band Aid, including up to 12 months payments in the gross loan amount. In many cases, these lenders were Godsends to many borrowers" according to Doug Thompson of Paradigm Funding of Danville.

"We evaluated the borrowers' prospects of turning their situations around and only made the loan if we were fairly certain they would be able to honor their obligations. Remember, these were high risk loans and carried interestrates of 14 to 20 percent and 10 to 12 points," (a point is one percent of the loan amount).

Doug Thompson is one of the good guys. He gave me all the details on how and why the legislation to protect the consumer came about.

He wanted us to understand that not all private money lenders were out to gouge the consumer and that now, the industry has strict guidelines when it comes to high risk, high cost loans.

Before the effective date, October 1, 1995, the Feds passed the "Home Ownership and Equity Protection Act", commonly known as Section 32, an amendment to Regulation Z, Federal Truth In Lending Law.

Section 32 affects certain residential mortgage transactions and is primarily a lending disclosure law, but includes specific prohibitions.

Mortgage loans excluded from Section 32 are purchase money loans, home equity lines of credit and loans on non-owner occupied dwellings.

For loans that qualify for disclosure under Section 32, there is generic information required informing the borrower that merely because they have received the disclosures or signed an application, they are not required to complete the agreement (take the loan).

The disclosure must also spell out that the lender will have a mortgage on the home and state specifically that the borrower could lose their home and any money put into it if the borrower does not meet the obligation under the loan.

There are also loan specific disclosures required.

On a fixed rate loan, the APR (annual percentage rate) and the amount of the regular monthly payment under the terms of the loan (after any discount period if there is one).

On a variable rate mortgage, the initial APR, the regular monthly payment (after any discount period if there is one), a statement that the interest rate may increase and the amount of the maximum monthly payment under the terms of the loan.

If the APR or the regular payment amount changes prior to closing, but after the required disclosure has been made, a redisclosure and an additional three-day waiting period (on top of the six-day mandatory waiting period-after signing the loan documents) is required.

There are two situations that will cause a specific loan to be subject to Section 32 disclosure and prohibition requirements. A loan will be subject tosection 32 if either situation occurs. Both situations do not have to occur.

■ APR: If the APR of the loan exceeds the Treasury rate by 10 percent inthe same month that the application is taken. For example, if the Treasury security issue has a rate of 6.00 percent but the loan rate (APR) is 16.50 percent, which is 10.50 percent greater than the Treasury security rate, thenthe loan would be subject to section 32.

■ Points and Fees: Points and certain fees paid by the borrower, plus any compensation paid to the broker by the lender, must not exceed the greater of$400 or 8 percent of the total loan amount.

As a practical matter, loans of $5000 or less are subject if appropriatepoints and fees exceed $400. Loans in excess of $5000 have to be measured bythe 8 percent rule. The majority of our private money lenders have a minimum loan requirement of $50,000.

Points and fees to be included in the 8 percent calculation: Prepaid finance charges such as loan fees, points, origination fees, escrow fees, maintenance fees and application fees.

Fees not included in the 8 percent calculation: Fees for real estate closing costs, such as credit report fees, appraisal fees, title insurance fees, documentation preparation fees and recording fees. Also, any credit insurance premiums, such as life and disability, paid to an affiliate are notincluded in the calculation.

The types of loan products are restricted as well.

A loan subject to section 32 may not have a balloon payment (all principal and interest due) of less than 5 years, may not have a prepayment penalty if the borrowers debt to income exceeds 50 percent and if there is a prepayment penalty, it may not exceed 5 years.

A prepayment penalty may not be collected when refinancing with the same lender. No negative amortized loan products may be used and no prepaid loan payments can be required"from the proceeds of more than two payments.

Section 32 shouldkeep the predatory lenders from abusing consumers who need the most protection. The penalties are stiff for noncompliance and enforcement is vigorous.

Information is current as of August 22, 2000. For information on specific mortgage programs, call the lender. Rates, points and programs are subject to change and cannot be guaranteed. Points include discount and origination fees. Most quotes are for 30-day [illegible] ins, unless otherwise stated. Rates quoted are based on loan amounts of $125,000. Maximum conventional loan amount $252,700; jumbo loans are in excess of $252,700. Annual Percentage Rate (APR)—an interest rate reflecting the cost of a mortgage as a yearly rate. This rate is likely to be higher than the stated note rate or advertised rate on the mortgage, because it takes into account points and other credit costs. The APR allows homebuyers to compare different types of mortgages based on the annual cost for each. [illegible] ARM–adjustable rate mortgage. LTV–loan to value. MI–mortgage insurance. NA–not available. NQ–rate not quoted. Lenders [illegible] listed in this paid column, call 1-800-CNS-8525. NOTICE
The Times'/ Ledger Dispatch
In cooperation with animal rescue groups, advises advertisers to always ask an adoption fee for animals. Giving away pets for "Free" can put them in danger. "Free" pets can easily end up being abused. No amount of screening can prevent this. Also, it is a good idea, when possible, to obtain the new owner's full name, full address & phone number. For more information, contact Tony LaRussa's Animal Rescue Foundation at 925 685-1ARF or your local pet adoption agency.

A golfer grows into her game

MARTHA BURKARD OF ALAMEDA created quite a commotion when she won the San Francisco City Championship earlier this year at the tender age of 12. She was featured in golf magazines across the country and on CNN.

But as suddenly as Burkard exploded on the golf scene, she seemingly disappeared. Call it the Seve Ballesteros syndrome. Ballesteros, whose game also disappeared, simply explains, "That's golf."

Burkard, who easily disposed of women twice and three times her age in the City Championship, suddenly had so much trouble with her game that she couldn't even place in her own age 12-to-14 flights in Northern California junior competition.

"She grew over an inch in height since her victory in the City," said her Alameda teaching pro, John Lee, in explaining her slump. "That created some swing problems."

The good news is that Burkard, who celebrated her 13th birthday on Aug. 19, has her game back. She has won three straight tournaments.

Burkard began her comeback with a nine-stroke victory in the Fairfield Junior at Rancho Solano GC on Aug. 9. She followed that up on Aug. 11 with a victory in her flight in the Robert O'Brien Memorial at Poplar Creek GC in San Mateo, shooting 79-74. The overall title went to the other Alameda 12-year-old in the City, medalist Ki Shui Liao, who shot 74-74. Burkard beat Liao by six strokes on Aug. 14 in the Fred Merrick Classic at Spring Valley GC to win her flight for the third straight time, though she lost the overall title to Ale Braga.

One reason Burkard's victory in the San Francisco City became national news was a perceived connection to the Earl Woods syndrome. Tiger Woods has exploded onto the golf scene (any questions after Sunday's victory in the PGA Championship?), but his father, Earl, has been roundly criticized as overbearing, of depriving his son of a childhood. Could this 12-year-old Burkard be another case in point?

Fortunately, the Burkard family has no such syndrome.

The day after her victory in the City, the LPGA Tour held a press conference up the road in Sacramento at Twelve Bridges GC, and the main question was whether the tour would allow Burkard to play that week. The tour waffled, already under fire for allowing the 13-year-old Wongluekeit twins to play in the Nabisco (Dinah Shore) Championship in Palm Springs the previous week.

The Burkards could have pressed the point, creating headlines along the way. Instead, Martha let the matter slide. She decided not to enter, much to the relief of the tour. Burkard was given a free pass to the event, and introduced to her favorite LPGA stars.

Father Mike Burkard allowed his daughter to make that decision, and went along with whatever she decided.

"She decided not to play the LPGA Tour right now and that's fine with us," he said. "She also decided not to play against the men in the Alameda Commuters, and that was also fine with us."

So Burkard returned to junior competition, and very soon after that had problems with her game. Her decision not to play a tour event right after her victory in San Francisco had a silver lining. She was allowed to work out the problems in her swing away from any national spotlight, in the relative comfort of the local junior arena.

A very refreshing story, really. Consider that her failure to qualify for the U.S. Junior Championship was not picked up by any newspaper in the area. Burkard has room to grow, and the space to do it.

Mika Takayama, also of Alameda, is a veteran of the national spotlight. The junior at Alameda High first qualified for the U.S. Junior championship four years ago. Takayama was eliminated early in match play at Pumpkin Ridge GC in Portland earlier this month, but had a chance at redemption last week.

Lisa Ferraro of Lodi won the U.S. Junior, and found herself in a shootout

CHAMPIONSHIP MASTERS rowers hit the waters of Lake Merritt on Aug. 18 looking for a national title

Rowing — it's not just for college kids

Boats float across Lake Merritt in Masters Nationals

By Mike McGreehan
STAFF WRITER

Rowing's traditional image in this country is of young, strong, muscular college men working in perfect unison to win a race for their alma mater.

But the sport is much more far-reaching than that.

Last Thursday through Sunday, Lake Merritt was awash with dedicated rowers, their families and friends, and lots of curious onlookers wondering just what in the world was going on when the U.S. Rowing Masters National Championship Regatta came to town.

What they saw was very exciting. Lots of races, some cheering from the shore, blowouts and close finishes. What they also witnessed was a Lake Merritt tradition that many don't fully understand.

As a sport, rowing isn't as well known to most Americans as, say, baseball or football. Or maybe even soccer. But it does have a following. And a strong one, to boot.

"When we held the Masters Nationals in 1989, we had 600 participating then; we have 1,200 this year," said Alan Dreyfuss, president of the Lake Merritt Rowing Club.

Rowing isn't just for college men, either. For one, the minimum age for a masters rower is 27. Secondly, the Masters Nationals involved competitors from some 90 rowing clubs representing areas across the nation with at least one from Canada. Oh – and yes, women have taken to the sport as well.

"In recent years, we've experienced the greatest growth among women – that's a result of Title IX," said Karen Mittelstadt, communications coordinator for U.S. Rowing. "Older individuals have gotten into the sport, too. It's a non-impact sport, it's easy on the knees. We have people 80 and 90 years old in the sport."

No current Olympians were on hand, except for the U.S. national women's eight, who signed autographs and gave an exhibition on Saturday and Sunday. But as far as competitors go, any rower who won a medal at the elite national or international level this year was not eligible for the Masters National.

But don't for a moment think that the Masters Nationals was a second-rate event. Far from it.

Despite the advanced ages of a handful of competitors, rowing isn't for the faint of heart. Though some might equate the term "masters" with "over the hill," the races on Lake Merritt were very competitive.

"If you talk to the athletes, it all used to be playing and racing," said Dreyfuss. "But now it's super competitive. You have some ex-Olympians here who have never stopped training. You can't come here without training and expect to compete."

Rowing encompasses two distinct disciplines.

The first is sweeping, where each member of the crew has one oar. The second is sculling, which requires each person to have two oars.

Each discipline is made up of three events. In the sweeps, there are pairs, fours and eights. Sculls involves singles, doubles and quads or one, two and four rowers, respectively.

The eights have a person called a coxswain, a kind of driver whose job is to guide the crew while steering the boat. All other boats are steered by one of the rowers who uses a foot pedal to guide a small rudder.

"Here in the United States, the eights are considered the priority boats on the elite level," said Mittelstadt. "The U.S. women are the defending silver medalists at last year's world championships."

Like track races, or maybe even drag races, each race has its own special character.

Often, a boat gets out to a big lead and the race is pretty much decided early. In others, the drama plays itself out as the boats make their way down the course. But even when the winner gets off to a comfortable lead, there usually other boats jockeying for position in an effort to advance to the next heat or to win a medal.

Last Thursday and Friday were trials. From these, the top three finishers for each heat in every age group advanced to the finals Saturday and Sunday. Like a swimming or track meet, the object of the trials was to get into the finals.

While some of the trials competitors went all out to win their heats, most rowed strategically, saving their best for the final.

The U.S. Rowing Masters National Regatta has come and gone. For rowing aficionados, though, it only whets the appetite for what comes next month at the Sydney Olympics.

This year's Olympics will take place Sept. 15-Oct. 1. Rowing events will happen Sept. 17-24. As usual, the races promise to generate plenty of excitement, even for those of us just now learning the subtleties of the sport.

Rowing riding tide of popularity

By Mike McGreehan
STAFF WRITER

Rowing is a sport growing in popularity in the United States. Its biggest following is probably found in the Northeast, though pockets of interest can be found in other parts as well.

The Bay Area qualifies as one of those other parts. And Berkeley High boasts one of the most successful rowing prep rowing teams in the Bay Area. In fact, it is one of the few prep rowing teams in the Bay Area.

The team's success was in evidence recently when five of its members were selected from the Southwest Regional Development Camp to compete in the American Rowing Championships in Syracuse, N.Y., Aug. 3-6.

Berkeley High students Erin Reinhardt, Lizzy Specht, Rachel Vandagriff, Rachel Berry-Millet and Veronica Bonczkowsky made up 5/8 of the Southwest Regional crew that took sixth place in the junior eights competition.

For Reinhardt, the experience on Syracuse's Lake Onondaga was doubly satisfying. She also raced in the intermediate fours competition. Her boat took fifth place in that race against some seasoned veteran competition. The intermediate level also includes college rowers.

"We were the only junior boat to make it to the finals; that was quite an accomplishment," said Reinhardt, an Oakland resident. "The only junior boats that raced were the ones that thought they were fast enough to race against the colleges."

The fours competition was plenty demanding. First, Reinhardt and her three teammates had to advance from their heat. The top three in each heat advanced to the semifinals. And the top three boats in the semifinals advanced to the final.

The eights competition was a bit less complicated, but still by no means a cakewalk. Reinhardt, Specht, Vandagriff, Berry-Millet, Bonczkowsky and company advanced directly to the final as one of the top two finishers in their qualifying heat.

Qualifying to get to the American Rowing Championships was no easy task. Only those invited by U.S. Rowing, the sport's national governing body, could go to the regional development camp. Rowers were then chosen for the American Rowing Championships.

Reinhardt, Specht, Vandagriff, Berry-Millet and Bonczkowsky were chosen from the Southwest Regional camp last month at Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kan.

"We were there two weeks," said Reinhardt. "Ours was he shortest of all the development camps."

The official high school rowing season is in the spring. But the team practices all year. Except when competition takes the rowers elsewhere, the team is at Lake Merritt every morning from 6 until 8:30.

As further training, members of the team do a lot of running, weightlifting, box jumps and spend much time working on ergometers (rowing machines).

Despite her success, Reinhardt, 16, a junior this fall at Berkeley High, is only in her second year as a rower.

"I'm good at it early," she said. "I did a lot of running (before getting into rowing). But I never did a lot of team sports."

Having already advanced far in the sport, Reinhardt hopes to make a step-by-step progression. Reinhardt's next goal is a spot on the U.S. Junior National Team.

"Next year I definitely want to go to selection camp and make the junior national team," she said. "And I have only one year to do it."

Junior national athletes must be under 18 years old.

Of course, Reinhardt doesn't want to stop there.

"2004 — that's when the Olympics are — that's my goal," she said. "I've just got to keep in shape and not fall back from what I've accomplished already."

with Takayama in her next national junior event. Takayama was tied with Ferraro after two rounds in the American Junior Golf Association RS Investment Management Classic at Twelve Bridges. But in the final round on Aug. 17, both shot 77 to tie for second place. Charlotte Mayorkas of Chula Vista grabbed the title with a final round 72.

Dong Yi of the Cal golf team also saw the national spotlight. The Alameda golfer has had a busy August. Yi qualified for match play in the NCGA Championship at Spyglass Hill GC last week, and was grateful to lose to Randy Haag in the second round.

"I had to catch a plane to New Jersey the next day," Yi explained.

Yi had a date with the U.S. Amateur at Baltusrol GC. Unfortunately, he shot 74-79 in qualifying to narrowly miss match play. No matter. He had a plane to catch to Japan.

The Cal golf team has been invited to play in the prestigious Topy Cup Tournament to be held Sept. 5-7 at the Tanagura CC in Tanagura, Japan.

Cal is one of just four U.S. collegiate teams to be invited to the tournament, which will also host eight Japanese men's teams, including Nihon University, which has won this tournament five of the last 10 years. The other U.S. teams invited to the tourney are pre-season No. 1 ranked Texas, Kansas and New Mexico.

The Cal team comes off an unexpected 17th place finish in the NCAA Championship last spring, and returns three of its five starters along with Yi, who red shirted last year.

Ron Salsig was coach of the Cal golf team while he was in graduate school at Berkeley, but he failed to defeat Tom Watson's Stanford team, was hanged in effigy, and resigned. He can be reached at ronsalsig@prodigy.net.

BILL MANN
Media Notes

Oh, Canada—life moves much more slowly there

WOLFVILLE, NOVA SCOTIA — Suffering from media fatigue? Tired of hearing nonstop news about celebs you never really don't care about, being bombarded with stories on radio and TV, being constantly exposed to the crude, the vulgar, and the shallow on radio (not to mention all the ubiquitous advertising)? I was. There may be no better tonic for media fatigue than a trip to the north, especially to a place like Nova Scotia, a lovely, sparsely populated area few Californians have visited and relatively few Americans have ever seen. I didn't come here to check out the electronic and print media, but to escape it. And that I did, spending lovely days in an area that's just being discovered as an eco-tourism destination, with verdant farm country, the world's highest tides (50 feet), and, ironically, more bald eagles per square mile than any place this birder has seen in America. Life moves at a much more leisurely pace up here in Acadia. And again, that's also true even in any Canadian city like Montreal, where I once lived.

But after a few days, to catch up on some news (the Demos' corona- was going on), I occasionally found myself turning on the car radio, or watching a few minutes of government-run CBC-TV, or reading Canada's fine new national newspaper, The National Post. I can't remember media, doing what I do, and thinking always interesting to contrast other countries' mass media to our own. In many ways, Canada's are almost the polar opposite.

One thing that didn't surprise me — something I've known for years – is how little Canadian news gets reported in the U.S. (Then again, the same goes for all international news.) Did you see a story last week about Canada's Prime Minister, Jean Chretien, getting hit in the face with a pie? Didn't think so.

I watched this story and saw the pie with meringue running down Chretien's face with alacrity. Yes, and I laughed, too. A young man, apparently opposed to bioengineered foods, casually strolled up to the country's highest elected official in Fredrick Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, and gently planted the pie in the PM's kisser. Even more surprisingly, he almost got away.

As an American, I was amazed that anyone could get through security (in this case, the RCMP) that easily, and get that close to the nation's leader. In the U.S., of course, he would have probably been a gun rather than produced, not pastry.

My astonishment that this could happen produced a lively discussion with our Canadian host, who said that this is, after all, Canada, a disarmed, non-weapons-packing country, and she didn't want her leader surrounded by muscle.

"But this guy could have been an American — with a gun," I said.

Our host was unmoved. We saw things from the different perspectives of our two countries.

Another story that went virtually unreported in the U.S. happened at the same time the Russian submarine tragedy was playing out — and was somewhat related. Forty Russian merchant seamen jumped ship in Halifax harbor and asked for asylum. The sailors said they hadn't been paid for months and that their rusting and leaking ship was unsafe. Sounds more than a bit like the Russian navy. (The Canadian government, by the way, impounded the cargo ship as an eco-hazard until necessary repairs are made.)

I also had the opportunity to listen to a long CBC Radio piece on submariners. CBC is roughly equivalent to our own NPR, of course. Even here there's a major difference: CBC stories are longer than NPR's. Much longer. And CBC, of course, enjoys far fewer restraints: I commercial restraints on commercial stations here. Two retired Canadian submariners were intensely questioned about their feelings and perspectives on the Russian Sea tragedy. I timed it: This interview ran 35 minutes. That length would have been unheard of — even on public radio. But perhaps the best example of

AUDIENCE MEMBERS take in the hearings of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission in Port Elizabeth, South Africa

The painful TRUTH

DESMOND TUTU chaired the South African Truth and Reconciliation hearings.

Moving film about South Africa's healing process offers lessons in the power of forgiveness

By Mary F. Pols
STAFF WRITER

Many Americans had never heard of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission until the parents of a blond Stanford graduate named Amy Biehl traveled to South Africa to testify before it.

Their daughter, living in South Africa on a Fulbright fellowship, had made international headlines when she was brutally murdered in 1993 by a mob in a black suburb of Cape Town, solely because she was white. But Peter and Linda Biehl told the commission they would not oppose amnesty for Amy's killers. Astonishingly, they were willing to forgive, because they believed that truth and reconciliation were the key to the future of the country their daughter had adopted as her own.

Amid the crowds of spectators and journalists watching the Biehls' inspirational testimony were a pair of documentary filmmakers from Oakland, Frances Reid and Deborah Hoffmann. They had their camera trained on the Biehls, like all the others.

But unlike the majority of them, Reid and Hoffmann stayed for the other stories, the ones that were not about a lovely American girl with a good heart who died a tragic death. Culling from the thousands of stories before the commission, Reid and Hoffmann picked three other cases and profiled them. Four black activists killed by white policemen. Three white women killed by a black activist's bomb. Seven black youths slaughtered by police in the same town where Biehl was murdered.

Ironically, what turned into one of the most intense and moving documentaries of the year, Sundance Grand Prize-winner "Long Night's Journey Into Day," began with a simple conversation over coffee and the New York Times at the duo's Rockridge home.

Early in the of summer 1997, Hoffmann was

Authenticity adds to Doña Thomas' appeal

By Nicholas Boer
STAFF WRITER

A wonderfully inventive Mexican restaurant just off the Telegraph Avenue exit on Highway 24 has been operating nearly two years and, while I only just discovered it, I want to claim it as my own.

Being open only for dinner Tuesdays through Saturdays allows chef/owners Dona Savitsky and Thomas Schnetz to maintain the cafe's high quality and confident character. It's called Doña Tomas for a reason.

The interior is simple, with big comfortable wooden chairs and tables, loud Mexican music and a long open kitchen/bar. A wide hallway parallels the restaurant, serving as a waiting area and leading to an open courtyard in the back, where diners can enjoy more tranquil environs. Here, eight tables with colorful tablecloths are set on attractive brickwork and bordered by a trellis of crimson bougainvillea and ivy-covered buildings.

The menu features interesting cheeses from Mexico, a rainbow of fresh and dried chiles, soulful sauces and a generous spirit.

I love the concept of botanas, a kind of premeal snack. There are just two on the menu, and we ordered them both right off: darkly roasted pumpkin seeds, served warm and salty with a hint of garlic and chile, and a bowl of cucumbers that have been split lengthwise, cut medium-thin on the bias and tossed with lime and ground arbol chile. The simple, addictive flavors set a festive mood, and help stave off hunger while you work your way down the descriptive menu.

You'll recognize the appetizer names, but the follow-through is unique. Quesadillas ($7.95) and tamales ($8.25) are served with mole sauces, one yellow (a Oaxacan specialty), the other chocolate-black.

The ceviche ($9.25) brings thin slices of lime-cooked salmon scattered through a plate of chunky avocado and ripe tomato salsa. It's surrounded by toothsome tortilla chips — not quite enough, but our waitress was quick to bring a fresh supply when we ran out. Our appetizers arrived one at a time, when ready, helping to encourage sharing.

Grilled fresh shrimp ($8.25) are small and salt-crusted, each one an easy forkful for dipping in a smoky-sweet and spicy chipotle sauce. The flavor is complex but the presentation is stark; freshly plucked cilantro leaves and fresh lime add just a spark of color.

Soup and salad are just that, a single choice of each. There's tortilla-lime soup ($5.95), and a clean-tasting Mexican-style Caesar ($6.50), made with a distinctive dry and mellow cheese that binds the dressing to the salad.

The eight entrees — four seafood,

THE BIG GUY'S BACK! The ultimate Lizard King returns to his stomping grounds in "Godzilla 2000."

"AUTUMN IN NEW YORK": A sappy and melodramatic film starring Winona Ryder and Richard Gere in a May-September romance. The film looks good, thanks to the cinematography by Changwei Gu, but the script is atrocious. The main characters don't act like real people, and they don't say things real people say. Ryder and Gere don't display much chemistry, and that's vital in a movie that wants to make us cry. — C. Lemire. (PG-13: language, sensuality.) 1 hour, 45 minutes. C-

"BLESS THE CHILD": Kim Basinger fights with Satan and Rufus Sewell over the soul of her possibly autistic, definitely saintly 6-year-old niece. And yet, yawn. This is the least thrilling supernatural thriller to come along in a long time. It's like "The Exorcist" crossed with "Touched By an Angel," with the latter unfortunately dominating. Basinger sleepwalks through her role, gingerly picking her way through hordes of demons in elegant Grace Kelly outfits. The Catholic Church comes across pretty well, though, and so do angels, who crop up every now and again to save the day. Even Jimmy Smits and a brief but dramatic appearance by everyone's favorite bad girl, Christina Ricci, can't save "Bless the Child." — M. Pols. (R: violence, drug content and language.) 1 hour, 50 minutes. D

"BLOOD SIMPLE": This rerelease of Joel and Ethan Coen's first movie is billed as a director's cut, but it isn't radically different from the original 1984 version. That said, it's still well worth a trip to the theater instead of the video store. The Coens (who brought us "Fargo," "Raising Arizona" and "The Big Lebowski," among others) have cleaned up the print, redone the sound and cut five minutes from what was already a tight, taut thriller about a man who takes out a very complicated hit on his cheating wife. This is a don't-miss for fans of the Coen brothers who missed it the first time around, but anyone who likes smart, marvelously acted well-paced movies shouldn't miss it either. M. Emmet Walsh is wonderfully terrifying as the hit man/private detective, and Frances McDormand makes her screen debut as the dewy, innocent-looking wife. — M. Pols (R: violence and language.) 1 hour, 37 minutes A-

"BUT I'M A CHEERLEADER": A cotton-candy movie with an enticing premise that doesn't quite deliver. Natasha Lyonne plays Megan, a cheerleader whose parents suspect she's a lesbian because she eats tofu, likes Melissa Etheridge and enjoys looking at her fellow cheerleaders more than she enjoys kissing her boyfriend. They ship her off to True Directions, a sort of "rehab for homosexuals" run by Cathy Moriarty. While being instructed on feminine niceties such as vacuuming and dishwashing, Megan falls in love with a fellow patient, a nicely sulky Clea DuVall. The lesson, about learning to believe in yourself and accept the way you are, feels a little too ABC Afterschool Special to be truly effective, and after a funny start, fades away in the second half. Forgettable. — M. Pols. (R: mature subjects and sexual situations.) 1 hour, 25 minutes C

"CECIL B. DeMENTED": The first half of this new John Waters attack on mainstream cinema is so clever and funny that it feels like a real shame when the movie loses steam and collapses on itself in the second half. The Sprocket Holes, a group of crazed young filmmakers led by Cecil B. DeMented (Steven Dorff), kidnaps a huge Hollywood star (Melanie Griffith) while she's in town for the premiere of her latest, "Some Kind of Happiness." They force her to star in their underground movie, shot in the streets of Baltimore, using real guns and guerrilla tactics. Griffith is really quite wonderful — she's something wild — as the vain movie star, and there are many, many good laughs along the way. But the mounting violence and body count treads all over the parody. In the end, it's hard not to wonder, what was the point? — M. Pols. (R: crude sexual content, violence, language and drug use.) 1 hour, 28 minutes C+

"THE CELL": A beautiful, striking film, well-acted and wonderfully weird. Jennifer Lopez stars as a child therapist experimenting with a new technology that allows her to enter the brain of comatose patients. When a serial killer (Vincent D'Onofrio in the year's best creepy performance) falls into a coma, leaving his seventh victim in a life-threatening booby trap, Lopez is enlisted by Vince Vaughn, as an earnest and intense FBI agent, to enter the killer's brain and find the girl's location. The comparisons to "Silence of the Lambs" are obvious, but under the capable hands of commercial and music video director Tarsem Singh, making his feature debut, it's much more than just a copycat. Visually arresting, and not just because Lopez has never looked or acted better. But a warning: The serial killer and woman-in-peril plot is not just tired, it's exploitative. If you're sick of it, too, you might want to stay away. — M. Pols. (R: violence, sexuality and language,) 1 hour, 45 minutes. B+

"THE COLOR OF PARADISE": A worthy but manipulative offering from the director of the Oscar-nominated "The Children of Heaven." Set in Iran, it tells the poignant story of a boy (Mohasen Ramezani) whose father's impending marital plans impinge on their relationship. Baldly heartstugging, the film doesn't stack up against some of the best works by Iranian directors. Nevertheless, it's a powerful experience. — K. Thomas. (PG) 1 hour, 30 minutes. B-

"COYOTE UGLY": Piper Perabo stars as one of a group of heedless wenches who dance on a bar and pour straight shots down the throats of the seething multitude at a bar called Coyote Ugly. You've seen it all before: A New Jersey girl with dreams of becoming a songwriter moves to the big city — in this case, Manhattan — meets a guy, gets a job as a bartender and has a heart-rending reconciliation with her dad. The plot's predictable, and the real reason to see this female version of "Cocktail" is its charismatic star, Perabo, who deserves a better movie. — R. Ebert (PG-13: sensuality.) 1 hour, 41 minutes. C

"CROUPIER": He likes to stay detached and figure the odds. He isn't a gambler But when Jack Manfred (Clive Owen) gets a job at the roulette wheels in a London casino, it turns out to be a very dodgy bet indeed. He's a womanizer (Gina McKee, Kate Hardie and Alex Kingston play his liaisons) and a man with a secret, which is that his obsessive need for control comes from a troubled childhood. When one of the women tempts him with a scheme for defrauding the casino, it's a threat to his whole carefully constructed facade. Directed by Mike Hodges. — R. Ebert (NR mature themes.) B

"THE EYES OF TAMMY FAYE": This entertaining documentary on Tammy Faye Messner, formerly Tammy Faye Bakker, presents the world through the heavy lashes of its subject. This "not-just-the-facts, ma'am" type of documentary puts Tammy Faye on a pedestal usually reserved for Nobel Peace Prize winners. Not to worry. Half serious and half campy, the documentary presents a woman sincere in her beliefs. And how could you resist someone who says, "You cannot go forward looking into the rearview mirror of life"? — K. Turan. (PG-13: some sexual content.) 1 hour, 19 minutes. B

"GIRL ON THE BRIDGE": A disappointing, superficial ending mars an intriguing if rather half-baked effort from challenging French director Patrice Leconte. Heavily laden with metaphors, "Girl" follows the sadomasochistic, symbiotic relationship between a knocked-around carnival performer (Daniel Auteuil) and his assistant (Vanessa Paradis). "Girl" is most entertaining when it doesn't take itself so seriously. Sadly, most of the time it does take itself seriously. — A.O. Scott. (R: sexual situations and obvious sexual metaphors.) 1 hour, 32 minutes C+

"GODZILLA 2000": It's the feel-good comedy of the summer, and it probably doesn't mean to be. The guy in that big green rubber suit, aka Godzilla, takes on a big rock that turns into a UFO, then transforms into a monster. The showdown begins, but not before some inept dialogue and really bad special effects. Still, it's innocent, harmless fun. — C. Lemire. (PG: monster violence and mild language.) 1 hour, 37 minutes C-

"HOLLOW MAN": There's nothing to redeem this Paul Verhoeven ("Basic Instinct," "Showgirls") thriller, not even the special effects. Bacon plays Sebastian Caine, a maniacal scientist who decides to try out the invisibility serum he's invented for the Pentagon. Something goes awry in the process and Sebastian turns into the Invisible Creep, specializing in sneaking peeks at unclothed women. His ex-lover and colleague Linda McKay (Elisabeth Shue) has to deal with the consequences of his experiment. The script is laughable the acting abysmal and the whole mess is topped of with a graphic blood bath that will make you wish the whole cast could be dosed with invisibility serum. — M. Pols. (R: graphic violence, sexuality, language.) 1 hour, 45 minutes. F

"NUTTY PROFESSOR II: THE KLUMPS": Eddie Murphy is back, reprising all eight of his roles from the 1996 remake of the Jerry Lewis goofball classic. The plot is insignificant; all that matters is that Murphy is just as good this time around, taking us deeper into the lives of genius professor Sherman Klump's dysfunctional family. The poor taste of the flatulence and fat jokes are undeniable, and certainly step over the line on more than one crude occasion. But the wonder at seeing Murphy make the Klumps come alive as very distinct people is equally undeniable. It's not just makeup and padding doing the trick here, it's fine acting on Murphy's part. He even makes the twinkles in their eyes seem different. — M. Pols. (PG-13: crude humor and sex-related material.) 1 hour 50 minutes B

"THE PATRIOT": Mel Gibson plays reluctant revolutionary Benjamin Martin in this stirring 1776 war flick, pressed into action despite his longing to stay home on his farm and raise his seven motherless children. Dinner than a barbecue and fireworks for inspiring patriotic feelings, it's also impressively gorgeous. Martha Stewart would love it. Nine put together prettier battle scenes. Even the swamps look good. And best because it's a war and all doesn't mean Mel can't inject a little humor into the proceedings. With excellent performances by Jason Isaacs as the redcoat you love to hate and Tom Wilkinson as the arrogant General Cornwallis. Australian hunk Heath Ledger plays Martin's oldest son, Gabriel. M. Pols. (R: heavy violence in the battle scenes.) 2 hours, 38 minutes. B+

"THE PERFECT STORM": Director Wolfgang Petersen makes Sebastian Junger's best-seller about the real October 1991 storm that thrashed the Northeast come to life. Dazzled but gorgeous George Clooney leads the fine crew (including Mark Wahlberg and John C. Reilly) as their sword-fish boat goes up against the big ones. Back on land, their loved ones are anxiously waiting in a Gloucester bar to learn of their fate. With Diane Lane, unfortunately overacting and sounding more like Katharine Hepburn than a salty Massachusetts girl. Heavy on the schmaltz, but the action sequences and special effects are too compelling to let that ruin this tale of the sea. — M. Pols. (PG-13: plenty of scary scenes in the water.) 2 hours, 10 minutes

"THE REPLACEMENTS": Here's a movie that's completely upfront about its intentions. A motley crew of replacement players will be gathered, dressed in uniforms and turned into a Team. They will do funny things on and off the football field, and by the end, at least one of them will discover that he has Heart. Cheerleaders will appear periodically to ensure that the testosterone level is complete. Inspired by the 1987 NFL players strike, "The Replacements" tries to emulate better sports movies, from "Slap Shot" to "The Bad News Bears," and does not succeed. But it's actually kind of hard to dislike Gene Hackman and Keanu Reeves as the Coach and the Quarterback endure much hokiness, but still manage to be winning. — M. Pols. (PG-13: crude sexual humor and language.) 1 hour, 54 minutes. B-

"SAVING GRACE": A light, hilarious English comedy to wash away the ill effects of summer blockbusters. Twice Oscar-nominated Brenda Blethyn ("Secrets & Lies," "Little Voice") leads a seamless cast of character actors. She plays Grace Trevethyn, whose philandering husband has died and left her with a mountain of debt. Looking for a way to pay it off, the genteel Grace utilizes her natural talent for gardening and sets up a marijuana farm in her greenhouse. Her partner in crime is her gardener, Martin, played with considerable hangdog charm by Craig Ferguson, who also co-wrote this gem. In the tradition of "Waking Ned Devine," "Saving Grace" takes part of its strength and charm from its setting, a seaside village in Cornwall where everybody definitely knows everybody's name. Easy to see why this charmer scooped up the Audience Appreciation award at Sundance 2000. — M. Pols. (R: drug content and language.) 1 hour, 33 minutes. A-

"SCARY MOVIE": If you've seen the amusing trailer, consider yourself as thoroughly entertained as anyone who sits through the whole movie. Director Keenan Wayans has blended the plots and characters from teen horror flicks such as "Scream" and "I Know What You Did Last Summer" into a parody that is more stupid than funny. Tons of highly offensive jokes involving bodily functions and sexuality. The scary thing is thinking about all the 12-year-olds who are going to get a kick out of the gags, many of which are flat-out homophobic. — M. Pols. (R: sexual humor, drug use, language and violence.) D+

"SPACE COWBOYS": OK, so it's not actually "The Golden Girls in Outer Space" but it sure seems like it. Clint Eastwood directs and stars in this amiable but silly comedy-drama about four retired Air Force pilots (Eastwood, Tommy Lee Jones, James Garner and Donald Sutherland) called into action to help NASA with a problematic — and an antiquated — Russian satellite. After a month of training, they're off in the space shuttle to save the day. With four such fine actors, this ought to have been better, but it doesn't quite make it. For one thing, the incessant jokes about heart attacks, poor eyesight and dentures wear thin. Then there's the credibility of the story. Does NASA really send astronauts into space without telling them the truth about their dangerous assignments? — M. Pols. (PG-13: brief nudity.) 2 hours. C

"STEAL THIS MOVIE": It's the Abbie Hoffman story, and it takes turns being as exhilarating and as exasperating as its subject was. Vincent D'Onofrio is outstanding as the founder of the Yippie movement and Janeane Garofolo does well in the thankless role of his much-loved but deserted wife, Anita. Filled with well-executed flashbacks to the late '60s and early '70s, with real footage spliced in of events, including rioting at the 1968 Democratic National Convention. Nice acting all around, including excellent supporting characters such as Donal Logue and Troy Garrity (playing his own father Tom Hayden). But the film never quite succeeds as it should have. — M. Pols. (R: violence, brief nudity, drug content and language.) 1 hour, 51 minutes. B-

"THE TAO OF STEVE": It's being sold as a men's movie, in which a strangely studly fat guy (Donal Logue) explains how the Tao of Steve (McQueen, Garrett. Austin) helps him bag the babes. But in first-time director Jenniphr Goodman's hands, it's actually just a chick flick, a fat-boy-meets-skinny-girl movie. After all his years of philandering, Logue's character Dex, is irresistibly drawn to stage designer Syd (Greer Goodman, the director's sister) and so the despicable, callous cycle of Steve will be righteously smitten by women power. Yeah, right. Sorry, girls, the mysteries of men aren't solved here. Still, the smart dialogue and hugely appealing Logue make this indie flick worth watching. — M. Pols. (R: language and drug use.) 1 hour, 28 minutes. B-

"WHAT LIES BENEATH": Michelle Pfeiffer and Harrison Ford star as a Vermont couple who should maybe consider leaving their beautiful lakeside home. The neighbors seem like wackos and there is some strange stuff going on in the house, from murmuring voices to doors that open just as Pfeiffer reaches for the knob. The movie is formulaic, rife with red herrings and classic suspense movie manipulations (carefully placed mirrors and a soundtrack that toys with our emotions), but it's terrifying nonetheless. Having Pfeiffer in practically every frame doesn't hurt; she's at her best playing vulnerable, neurotic, sexy and angry in one glorious package. — M. Pols (PG-13: terror/violence, sensuality and brief language.) 2 hours, 10 minutes. B

"X-MEN": With Patrick Stewart and Ian McKellen playing the good guy and the bad guy respectively, how bad could this movie about misunderstood mutants be? Not bad at all, as it turns out. "X-Men" is a fun ride, with shimmering special effects, star power (besides the aforementioned English smoothies, Halle Berry, Rebecca Romijn-Stamos, Anna Paquin and Australian newcomer Hugh Jackman don various mutant personas) and a basic good vs. evil premise. The filmmakers would like us to think "X-Men" has some deep meaning about intolerance, but please we've seen variations on this theme plenty of times before. Whether dedicated fans of the long running "X-Men" comic book series will be happy with the adaptation is unclear, but if this one's a hit — and it mostly likely will be — there's "X-Men franchise" written all over it. — M. Pols. (PG-13: sci-fi action violence.) 1 hour, 35 minutes. B-

Truth

engrossed in an article about the Truth and Reconciliation Commission; she loves courtroom dramas, and what was going on there brought to mind the Holocaust and the end of Nazi journey, a topic she's also fascinated by. She looked up from the article.

"And I said, someone should be making a film about it," she said.

"I really didn't mean us," she recalled, laughing. "I was just saying that."

For Reid, the African continent had long held intrigue. In 1968, she and her then-husband joined the Peace Corps and were sent to Malawi to teach. Together they made a film about the town where they were living, and then two more documentaries about Africa after that. So she latched onto Hoffmann's idea.

"It was one of those light-bulb-going-off moments," she said.

The two women are longtime partners — that's evident from the way they finish each other's sentences — and they've worked on each other's projects before. Reid did camerawork on Hoffmann's moving portrait of her mother's descent into Alzheimer's, the Oscar-nominated "Complaints of a Dutiful Daughter," and Hoffmann has edited Reid's documentaries before, including "Skin Deep," an exploration of race relations among college students. (Reid has also been nominated for an Oscar, for her short, "Straight From the Heart.")

But "Long Night's Journey Into Day" represents their first collaboration as filmmakers from beginning to the end of a project.

Their way into the story was as fortuitous as their discovery that they wanted to make a film about the Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

Both were familiar with the Amy Biehl story, partly because Reid's associate producer at the time was Kirsten Jones-Neff, a Stanford grad who had known Biehl. When Reid told her of her sudden interest in the Truth and Reconciliation hearings as a possible film topic, Jones-Neff tracked down the Biehls. They were just about to leave to testify at the hearings, but they agreed to talk to the documentarians. A few weeks later, Reid and Hoffmann were on a flight to South Africa to film the amnesty hearings for Amy Biehl's killers.

Hoffmann and Reid ended up taking six more trips to South Africa over the course of the next two years, spending nearly six months there. Despite the compelling nature of the Biehl story —guaranteed to attract American audiences — the filmmakers said they wanted to move beyond it. It seemed too much of an anomaly from the other cases before the commission. So it ended up being an entry point into the film, a starting point to understanding the process of forgiveness.

The three other stories told in "Long Night's Journey Into Day" are more typical of Africa. A white police officer appeals for amnesty, admitting that he and other policemen were responsible for an unsolved crime from more than 10 years before; the beating and burning of four black activists from the township of Cradock. A black soldier from the rebel African National Congress, convicted in the firebombing of a bar that killed three white women, asks for amnesty. And a group of mothers meets two of the policemen who tricked their seven sons into rebellion, then ambushed and murdered them, in a suburb called Guguletu.

In each case, forgiveness does not come as readily as it did for the Biehls.

Observing the hearings was such an intense experience that the pair felt relieved whenever they left. Back in Reid's office, Iris Films at Berkeley's Fantasy Studios, the chore of fund-raising, which most documentary filmmakers find the worst part of their job, was actually a welcome break. They watched the journalists covering the hearings full time turn into chain-smoking, coffee-swilling wrecks, and were grateful they had a place to retreat to.

Because they had such limited time in South Africa, Reid and Hoffmann frequently had to book interviews with victims and culprits on the same day. They'd go from interviewing one of the widows of the Cradock 4 in the morning to interviewing the white police officer, Erik Taylor, who killed her husband, in the afternoon.

"It was a little creepy for us," Hoffmann said.

"It almost felt like a betrayal," Reid added.

Getting at the absolute truth of what had happened was almost impossible.

"You're never really going to know the truth because the participants no longer know the truth," Hoffmann said.

Both women ended up with the conviction that the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, however flawed, was a success, and that South Africa will be a stronger country for it. But whatever bias they might have had toward the process, the film is carefully balanced to tell all sides of each story. It lends the project a striking humanity.

When Taylor testifies before the commission, he seems unsympathetic and unremorseful, practically monstrous. It took coaxing to get him to agree to speak on-camera, but finally Taylor agreed. Sitting in his kitchen explaining what made him see what he did was wrong — reading Nelson Mandela's autobiography and watching an American movie about the civil rights movement, "Mississippi Burning" — he is both pathetic and remorseful. (Since "Long Night's Journey Into Day" was released, Taylor was denied amnesty. He may eventually face trial for his crime.)

On that first trip to Cape Town, both women were nervous that being foreigners might hamper the filming process. Instead, it helped to be outsiders.

"There was almost a kind of gratitude that people from outside South Africa were interested enough to come," Reid said.

Finding stories was easy. The material was so rich, they could have profiled hundreds of cases. That they ended up with two stories that connected (one of Biehl's killers had been a child when the Guguletu 7 were killed, he saw the bodies on his way to school) was convenient, but unsurprising, Hoffmann said.

"You could pick any two stories and there would be a connection," Hoffmann said. "There isn't a person there who didn't witness something horrible."

They had enough access and connections to dig out archival footage from 15 years ago. Some came from freelance cinematographers, who had shot the funerals of both the Cradock 4 and the Guguletu 7. Other footage had to be dug up from the files of South Africa Television, archives that mostly consisted of piles distributed around the office.

"You should have seen us crawling around on the floor," Hoffmann said.

Other logistical complications of shooting a film 9,000 miles from home included the time differences. Whenever the filmmakers were back home in Rockridge, Reid would try to keep in touch with sources and send out feelers for research and future interviews. This meant making calls between midnight and 4 a.m. The pressure was intense, and sometimes they drove each other crazy. But they both agree they couldn't have made "Long Night's Journey Into Day" without each other's complementary talents.

"We have no overlapping skills," Hoffmann said with a laugh.

After three intense years, much of it spent on the road, it's no wonder that now, the last question they want to hear is: What's next for them? All they want to do is rest.

"Making a film 9,000 miles from home really has kind of burnt us out," Reid said.

In the middle of filming, Reid was diagnosed with breast cancer. She fought it successfully, but said the experience convinced her to take some time for herself. Since "Long Night's Journey Into Day" is in such high demand on the festival circuit, relaxation time has been elusive. Earlier this month, the pair were at the Jerusalem Film Festival. They're also getting the film ready for its television debut on HBO's Cinemax next spring. Finally, there are the appearances to introduce the film, including one before its East Bay debut at the UC Theatre on Friday (the film plays through Aug. 28).

Finally, there's another important date looming in the future for "Long Night's Journey Into Day": Oscar time. It's only August, but the buzz is well under way. Everyone, from their relatives to other filmmakers and even people on the street, is telling them a nomination is inevitable.

Just the other day, KQED host and SF Weekly columnist Michael Fox introduced a San Francisco screening of the movie with the prediction that it would be remembered by the Academy come next March.

"If we don't get nominated, we're going to have to sneak out of town," said Hoffmann.

Both the beef carne asada ($14.95) and pork carnitas ($13.50) are made with Niman Ranch meats, and the menu says that organic and local products are used whenever possible.

The carnitas were devilishly good. Crusty outside, moist and tender inside, the hot meat is permeated with herb and spice. Traditional garnishes were also uncommonly good: scented refried black beans, moist green-tinted rice, salsa fresca and grilled scallions. Warm tortillas on the side gives the option of wrapping it all up or choosing flavorful forkfuls.

After my carnitas, I groaned just reading "bread pudding" and "chocolate brownie," but a little further down on the menu was a caramel flan. All the desserts are $5.75 — a bit steep perhaps for flan, silky-good though it was.

My companions shared an incredibly generous sundae, made with scoops of super-dense vanilla bean ice cream, sweet-spiced Mexican chocolate sauce and cajeta — a rich caramel made from goat's milk.

Our waitress was warm and helpful, though by the time it came to take our dessert order she was racing, looking anxious when it appeared we might not make an immediate decision.

Our coffee was organic, but the drink menu is festive, with various hand-shaken margaritas, dozens of tequilas, lots of Mexican beers and even a Mezcal sampler.

There's a good choice of wines from California, but the Coca-Cola comes from Mexico — in a bottle. That's just the kind of authentic touch that makes Doña Tomas so sweet.

What we see on the surface in American radio and TV is appalling enough; what's behind it all is even more dismaying, even ominous.

That's why it's both pleasant and important to someone who works in media to visit Canada once in a while and see again that things can and should be done differently. And I'm not saying the CBC is perfect, or that all of it would work here. But certainly in the area of broadcasting, which was created with the outmoded idea of the public interest in mind, not only is our way not the best way, it's not even close.

Guilty Pleasure: I'll miss "Survivor." Like a bad soap opera (I know, that's redundant) I got hooked on the silly show in the first three weeks. I could barely stand any of the people on the island, and so much of what I saw was so contrived and hokey (especially those challenges) I was embarrassed to watch a lot of the time.

Part of the appeal of the runaway hit summer show, for me anyway, was undeniably the old "Hawaii Five-O" factor — waving palm trees and tropical settings. I am, alas, a sucker for this shopworn scenario, having spent much of my boyhood playing on similar beaches while growing up in Hawaii.

But the major appeal for me was to watch a master manipulator in action. Even Alfred Hitchcock has nothing on "Survivor" producer Mark Burnett. In the technical sense, the guy is a modern, nonpolitical version of Hitler's favorite image manipulator, the acclaimed (if controversial) director, Leni Riefenstahl.

Burnett is a genius at film editing and the juxtaposition of images and time: He created interpersonal conflicts and friendships; shifted time; created a sense of danger with his shots of tree snakes, rays lurking under sea rocks, stormy skies, etc. etc. The guy may or may be a genius, but he certainly knows how to create a viable commercial product. His talent extends to having kept the ultimate winner secret for months, of even creating bogus clues on the show's Web site.

The guy is so good he's almost scary. Let's just hope he doesn't go to work full-time for a political party, like Riefenstahl did. By the way, I agree with popular KGO Radio host Ronn Owens, an unabashed "Survivor" fan, about "Survivor II." The sequel will debut after the Super Bowl and be set in Australia, and for several reasons (novelty being among them) "Survivor II" may be popular, but it probably won't be nearly as popular as the original has been. Still, if there's one person you don't want to underestimate, it's Mark Burnett.

Apropos to the Above: This is the actual headline on a press release I got this week from USA Network to plug Sunday night's episode of its new "Manhattan, AZ" comedy: "Ever Seen a Grown Man Naked? How About a Grown Man Naked, Covered in Goat Placenta? How About a Grown Man Naked, Covered in Goat Placenta, Performing T'ai Chi?"

Don't blame Canada.

WHEN THE MAJOR PARTIES host a national convention, the floor is filled with delegates from across the nation who will cheer, chant and wave pennants and posters in support of their candidates

Catching campaign feve

At a political convention, it can be very contagious

By Alex Gronke
STAFF WRITER

Dion Aroner wasn't expecting much when she went to last week's Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles. But the four-day gathering still managed to underwhelm her.

"It was more boring than I thought it would be," said Aroner.

She did admit, though, that there were times on the floor of the convention hall that she felt a quickening of her blood. "You do get caught up in it, and it's fun."

Melanie Sweeney-Griffith might have been responsible for some of the charged air around the California delegation in the Staples Center last week. The Oakland hills resident was a whip.

Whips, as the name suggests, were originally used in the era of fractious and raucous conventions to keep the delegation from wandering into another candidate's camp, to keep the delegation in line and on the floor and sober. Now the whip is more like an usher, crowd control manager and a cheerleader.

The whips distribute the signs and pennants that the delegates wave, they tell the delegation when to rise in standing ovation and they attempt to keep the aisles clear. It is not an undertaking for the diffident or the lazy. Unlike the other delegates, who are permitted to sit back and enjoy the proceedings — even take a mid-afternoon nap if the previous evening's soirees went too late — the whips must be on their feet at all times.

Why would Sweeney-Griffith give up some of the last days of summer before her son goes to college, not just to attend the convention, but also to assume a thankless duty that demanded she be on her toes for eight hours a day?

Making a difference

Eight years ago, Sweeney-Griffith, the present chair of the Alameda County Democratic Party, was not a terribly political person. For 20 years she was a psychologist for Alameda County and her energies went to the cause of mental health. But one afternoon in 1992 a colleague at work said in a casual conversation that African Americans don't make a difference in electoral politics.

"That made me mad," recounted Griffith Sweeney, who is African American. "I found myself so full of emotion that I volunteered at the Democratic headquarters on Broadway (in Oakland) that day after work."

It wasn't long before she retired from her job with the county and started a second career as an operator in the local Democratic Party.

Because of her eight- year commitment to party politics and a wish to see the quadrennial spectacle of a presidential nomination first hand, Sweeney-Griffith decided to stand in election to become a delegate to the Democratic convention in Los Angeles. She came in second and was joined in Los Angeles by her Montclair neighbor, David Stein, who went to the convention as an alternate delegate.

Despite the fact that conventions have evolved over the decades from internecine power struggles with unknown outcomes to sleek and stylized pageants determined to present a unified front to the public, Sweeney-Griffith wasn't cynical about the process. "I was cynical before I got involved in politics," she said.

"The system won't work if you don't get involved," she added. "If you just sit back and moan, nothing will happen. I know it sounds trite, but one person can make a difference."

ALAMEDA'S BERRY BINGHAM does his job as he serves as a delegation whip on the floor of the Democratic National Convention.

JOANNA JHANDA/Staff

Sweeney-Griffith was like Aroner in that she had no fantasies that the role of a delegate was anything like what it was a generation ago. Delegates are no longer chits of political capital. Contenders for the nation's highest office no longer vie for a delegate's allegiance on the convention hall floor.

Stamp, chant, cheer

It could be said that Sweeney-Griffith and her more than 500 fellow California delegates and alternate delegates were in Los Angeles to act as extras in a massive production aimed at primetime television. When the California delegates joined their colleagues from the other states and territories on the floor of the Staples Center, their job was to stamp, chant, cheer and wave their signs and banners. Their votes were already accounted for — they didn't need to be there in person to nominate Al Gore. But they did need to be there to demonstrate their ardor for the Democratic ticket in a manner discernible to the television media that hovered over the convention hall floor.

The California delegation, in tribute to its size, was given prime real estate directly in front of the podium, flanked by Gore's home state of Tennessee and the strategically important battleground state of Ohio. As a consequence, the aisles surrounding the California seating area were often jammed shoulder-to-shoulder. Sweeney-Griffith said that the hardest part of her job was dealing with the media that swarmed around the California delegation. "The press would block the view of the delegates. A lot of them had really nasty attitudes," said Sweeney-Griffith.

Whips were also given a page of key points by the state party so that should a member of the press come hunting for less scripted quotes than the professional politicians usually offer, the whips would be prepared with a clean sound bite. Despite the jostling and the shoving, many delegates seemed to enjoy the attention of the media and soon learned to adopt the cadences of pundits when microphones or waited in front of the Boneventure for a tardy shuttle to take them to the Staples Center, Berkeley resident Osha Neumann was a few blocks away, keeping a watchful eye on eight protesters waiting to be arrested. The protesters sat with locked arms around a replica of an oil derrick in the middle of 6th and Flower streets. They were protesting on behalf of an indigenous, Colombian tribe that the demonstrators said was under threat from oil companies. At least a hundred police officers encircled the protest. A gaggle of photographers and reporters joined the police while protest sympathizers cheered their support and idle passersby stopped to watch the show.

A police officer approached the demonstrators and told them they had two minutes to disperse or they were going to be arrested. A student from UC Santa Cruz, who called himself Mr. Purple, reveled in the exhilaration of imminent confrontation. "My heart is beating fast, but I'm not scared," he declared.

Neumann, a lawyer, came to Los Angeles to help protesters should they find themselves in trouble with the law. If events turned ugly, Neumann wanted to be witness. Neumann had seen violence at a political convention before. He was an unindicted coconspirator in the 1968 Chicago street fight between the Chicago police and demonstrators at that year's Democratic convention. Neumann had a sense of how the protesters felt while waiting for the police to arrest them. "I'm worried about them, but I'm more worried about the people who aren't involved. These people are excited, energized and involved," said Neumann.

...KELEY LAWYER Osha Neumann made the ...o the convention to support the protesters and ...them if they had trouble with the law.

Most of the delegates were like Sweeney-Griffith, and blind to the marches and the small skirmishes that took place every day of the convention. But Jack Walton, a delegate from Concord who originally backed erstwhile contender Bill Bradley, did not dismiss the protesters so quickly. A student at Berkeley from 1964 to 1968, Walton's political consciousness developed during his four years at Berkeley.

"At first I cut classes, half in support of the free speech movement and half because I'd rather have played basketball than go to class," admitted Walton, whose cousin Bill Walton was a former teammate of Bill Bradley's on the New York Knicks. It was his cousin who first introduced Bradley to Walton.

When the free speech movement started during Walton's freshman year, he was an 18-year-old kid uncertain of his political affiliations. But by the time he graduated, he was a committed liberal Democrat and applied to be a conscientious objector to the war in Vietnam. Walton has remained in the progressive wing of the Democratic Party.

One afternoon, Walton went to Pershing Square in downtown Los Angeles where most of the protesters congregated before beginning their nightly march to the heavily policed perimeter around the convention hall. At first he considered taking off the credential he wore around his neck identifying him as a delegate. But he decided that would be dishonest.

Another party heard from

While milling around Pershing Square, Walton attracted the attention of members of the Green Party, who tried to convert him to their side.

"I was touched by their sincerity. They weren't there to cause problems as far as violence was concerned. They were there to cause a problem to a process that they felt was corrupt," said Walton. "They wanted to prick the system's conscience. In the end, though, I didn't convince them of anything, and they didn't convince me."

...ANNA JHANDA/Staff

OAKLAND DELEGATE Melanie Sweeney-Griffith seems to be enjoying her job as a whip on the floor of the convention, where the California delegation was visited by Tom Amiano of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors.

Walton came to the convention a Bradley backer, and was uncertain how far he could go in support of Al Gore. But by the end of the convention, the pep rally had had its intended effect and Walton was ready to get behind Gore. Montclair's Stein, however, needed no convincing.

Stein hoped that Al Gore would recognize him. Stein, an Oakland-based lawyer, was an intern for Gore when the vice president was a freshman congressman in 1977. When Gore made his first run for the White House in 1988, Stein put his practice on hold to work on the campaign. Once, when Senator Gore came out to the Bay Area to visit a high tech firm, Stein picked him up at the airport.

So on the afternoon that Air Force Two delivered the Vice President to Southern California on the penultimate day of the Democratic convention, Stein was in the sweltering hangar at the Mercury Air Center in Burbank with a couple of hundred other invited guests to greet the candidate, his wife, his running mate, and other Democratic dignitaries.

When the speeches finished and Gore set out into the crowd to touch the flesh of his admirers, Stein tried to catch Gore's eye. But the throng was too great and chaotic, and after a couple tours of the rope lines, the candidate got into his limousine without noticing his former intern and campaign worker.

But for Stein that was a minor disappointment in a week of excitement as an alternate delegate at the Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles.

Aroner sees no reason to attend another convention. "Once you've done it, you've done it," she said. Aroner agrees with convention reformers who would like to cut the spectacle from four days to two. "Monday is a waste of time and Tuesday isn't much better."

BUT THERE WAS more to the national convention than just politics. The week was also a lot of fun. At left, Walnut Creek attorney Daniel White kicked off his shoes to relax at the beach party hosted by the California delegation. And above, Melanie Sweeney-Griffith (left) and Alice Creason enjoyed the act of a Marilyn Monroe look-alike at a party at Universal Studios. But at right, the parties just seemed a little too much for delegate Don Camon of Ventura, so he took a little nap.

Hands by TheArthur Wright

City of Oakland Craft and Cultural Arts Department presents East Bay artists' displays at Alice Arts Center Arts Exhibition Series. The series will begin Sept. 1, 2000 and run through Feb. 28, 2001.

The exhibitions will rotate monthly with an opening reception the first Friday of each month, to celebrate and honor talented and diverse local artists.

The Artists submitted a proposal consisting of slides, project description, resume and artist statement, and were reviewed and selected by a panel of artists, curators, arts administrators and educators.

The exhibitions represent a variety of themes and will include sculpture, ceramics, folk arts, mixed media, photography, media arts, painting, drawing and performance art. The selections represent a fusion of color, texture, geography, culture and emotions.

The Alice Arts Center Art Exhibition Series is sponsored and presented by the City of Oakland Craft and Cultural Arts Department.

The window spaces were conceptualized and initiated by Christin Hablewitz, Craft and Cultural Arts staff, for the 2000 Oakland Arts Festival at the Alice and a year-round visual art exhibition series for the Alice Arts Center.

A paramount goal of the "new" Craft and Cultural Arts Department is to support, develop and value our local arts community. This series is to celebrate our visual artists and give them a chance to exhibit and sell their art at the Alice Arts Center.

Odyssia Bistro's Organic Ambrosia

Odyssia Bistro, located at Shattuck and Hearst, has been serving breakfast, brunch, lunch and dinner for five years. Odyssia serves a modern version of Mediterranean classics including anti pasta featuring baked goat cheese Timbale with sherried, shitake mushroom and fennel-onion ragout, tappas like roasted eggplant stuffed with feta cheese, dolamades and spanakopita, soups and salads.

For dinner entree, why not select the Moussaka, a Greek casserole specialty layered with ground beef, potatoes, eggplant, cinnamon, lemon and béchamy sauce. Or select from pastas like Greco Roman Penne Pasta with panchetta, spinach, sun dried tomato garlic, Pepperoncino, olive oil & mizithra cheese.

Odyssia Bistro also offers many vegetarian choices and features organically grown vegetables, fruits, and meats. Co-owner Naso says "Organic foods cost a bit more, but they bring a unique taste and quality to the menu."

Elegant and affordable, pricing is moderate with entrees ranging from $7 to $12. A nice wine list, by the glass or by the bottle, spotlights many Greek selections.

Once a month, Flamenco dancers and musical accompanists perform on a platform in the middle of the restaurant for dinner guests only. On these nights, there are only two seatings, 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. and a $2 cover charge.

"We fill up quickly – so make your reservations in advance," says Naso.

Odyssia Bistro is owned by partners Naso Eleftheriadis and Pascal Kuoromenos who also own the eight-year old Nefeli Restaurant on Euclid at Hearst which serves coffees, pastries, sandwiches, salads and also has a Mediterranean ambiance. Naso was born and raised in Drama, a tiny village in Northern Greece near the Mediterranean border.

Naso says, "In Drama, everyone knows everyone and takes care of everyone. Very different from here." Naso came straight to California to attend UC Davis and UC Berkeley for graduate work in Economics. Naso has transferred his knowledge of business and his love for Mediterranean food into success far from home.

Naso brings a Greek community feeling to the North Berkeley neighborhood restaurant. Odyssia Bistro has a warm, earthly quality with textured floors, candlelight lighting, and Greek mural reproductions accentuating art from Santorino.

Naso also has mounted a small projector screen near the front Counter where Naso is happy to provide a slide show of his homeland to those interested.

2000 Mercedes-Benz SL500: loaded

Keane on Wheels

By Tom Keane

It happened again! The 2000 Mercedes SL500 is the second car in a row that came without options. Of course, for $82,600, you'd expect it to be loaded.

The other car is the 2000 Chevrolet Cavalier Z24 that costs about one-fifth the price of the SL500. Price-wise, there's no comparison, yet the Z24 has features the SL500 lacks. The reason for the disparity, I suspect, is the SL500 was introduced about 10 years ago and is still riding on its laurels.

The 2000 SL500 is not an ordinary coupe/roadster. It's powerful and handles like a sports car. The ride is solid and firm, steering is true and the new engine will blow away most other cars on the road. The reason for the outstanding performance is the 2000 model is now powered by a 5.0-liter V8 engine that produces 305 horsepower. It gets 339 lb-ft of torque peaking at 2,700 rpm through 4,250 rpm. In other words, this is a very responsive coupe/roadster.

This car has stability control, traction control, plus a four-wheel independent suspension. The combination required that I not give in to my urge to speed and jeopardize my driver's license.

It's amazing that most of the driving features on the SL500 were produced

Gadgets to make driving less stressful

By Denise McCluggage

My car, a clever little thing, buzzes me if I leave the headlights on, so I never was away unwarned and let my battery drain into worthlessness. As a result, I haven't stranded myself for a long time.

I haven't run out of gas in a long time either, though I have done a little more tense coasting than is comfortable while praying a service station would appear around the next bend.

More certain and sophisticated ways of dealing with such crises are now readily available, and such problems should soon fade in the collective memory. I will no longer have any sympathy for anyone

Annual handcrafted automobile display

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA KIT CAR CLUB

SAN LEANDRO — Handcrafted car builders will meet at the San Leandro Marina to display their vehicles at the 18th annual Handcrafted Automobile Concourse Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 9 and 10.

The show is sponsored by the Northern California Kit Car Club, a non-profit organization dedicated to organizing and assisting amateur automobile builders and promoting the family recreation value of this hobby.

Club President Joel Heinke said the club expects 70 to 100 cars, from the California, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona area.

Replicas of legendary high performance sports cars, such as Cobras, Porsches, Lamborghinis and Austin Healeys, will grace the display along with reproductions of classics like the Mercedes-Benz 500K, the Mercedes-Benz SSK, and about 10 years ago. Of course, Mercedes-Benz has a reputation for being ahead of its time with automotive ingenuity, which accounts for why (other than the engine) it has given the SL500 only an occasional face-lift. Meantime, I'm told, a new model of the SL500 is in the works.

Maybe the manufacturer will address some things that I felt were shortcomings.

For example, this is a very macho car. I doubt women would appreciate the way the driver's door opens from the inside. The door handle requires a strong pull to open.

Just to move the seat's backrest forward requires a strong tug on a handle. Unfortunately, this virile attitude is found throughout the car.

The interior noise level might have been acceptable a decade ago, but that is no longer the case.

And the SL500 is not as conducive to listening to the audio system as are many of the up-to-date models.

This sound system will play a stack of CDs, but the stack loader is still in the trunk. Cars today hold six CDs in the system itself.

On the sound system's plus side is the fact that it can be used as a telephone, CD player, and tape player, as well as an AM/FM radio.

To convert this roadster into a convertible, one button is all that is required to lower or raise the canvas top. There is no need to release clamps; just hold the button down and the SL500 does it all for you.

There is a storage shelf behind the driver's seat and a trunk with limited capacity. With clever packing, it will hold a couple carry-on suitcases plus a golf bag.

Although the SL500 falls short in areas of comfort and convenience, it offers many thoughtful features. If the Nappa leather and wood trim aren't enough to grab attention, the 10-way power seats will.

And these seats can be programmed to three preset memory positions that include the setting for the driver's side mirror.

Other niceties are an automatic climate control with a dust filter; cruise control and an adjustable steering column that goes up, down in and out.

But the rear windows still use the old plastic glass that doesn't provide clear vision or a built-in defroster.

Although it lacks automatic headlamps, the car has tinted glass, a programmed locking system, and auto dimming rearview and driver-side mirrors.

Yet considering the $82,600 price tag, one might expect a bit more.

Before buying a used vehicle, pay for an evaluat

Dear Doctor: I plan on purchasing a 1988 Chevrolet Blazer next month. My brother said he would check it out before I buy it. Are there particular things that need to be looked at? Dean

Dear Dean: Before buying a used car or truck, it should go through a used vehicle evaluation at a cost of $75 to $100. The most common problems with the Blazer are worn front end parts and oil leaks from the engine.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1993 T-Bird 3.8-liter, supercharged V6 automatic with 96,000 miles. My problem is the "check engine" light sometimes comes on while I'm driving. The engine runs fine and has never had any problems. I asked a couple of mechanics what the problem could be. Their answers were to hook the car up to a computer scan tool. Does the "check engine" light mean the car has a major problem? Robert

Dear Robert: The "check engine" light will come on when the computer has a voltage value that is out of its range. This situation can be caused by either an input sensor or output switching device. Most of the time when the "check engine" light comes on, the engine will run in a rich condition (more fuel than required). The driver may not notice any difference in performance. Continued driving in this condition will lead to higher emissions and possible catalytic converter failure. The shops cannot pinpoint the problem without scanning the computer for trouble codes.

Dear Doctor: I need to buy a car that will carry five adults. Ninety percent of my 24,000-mile-a-year driving is on the highway. I would like your opinion on gas verses diesel power. With all the advances in diesel engines, would you recommend a diesel-powered car? Jim

Dear Jim: For your needs, a large car with a V6 gas engine would be my choice.

Dear Doctor: I would greatly appreciate any information on reasons why the accelerator sticks on my 1992 Chrysler LeBaron with 36,000 miles. The car will take off without my putting my foot on the gas pedal. I tried to stop the car by stepping on the brake pedal. The car went into a ditch and finally came to a stop. I was lucky that I was not hurt and the car was also fine. What caused the problem? Flo

Dear Flo: A few reasons account for unintended acceleration. The most common problems are a binding throttle cable or transmission pressure cable, lazy idle speed control motors, throttle position sensors, or — on some rare occasions — a partly open EGR valve, vacuum leak, or unmetered air entering the engine. A computer scan may not reveal any stored trouble codes in memory. My suggestion is a check of the linkage. If no binding is found, replace both the throttle position sensor and idle speed control motor.

Dear Doctor: I purchased a 1998 Taurus with 29,000 miles. It gets only 13.7 to 18 mpg in town and 22 mpg on the highway. I know of two Taurus's around town that get 24 city and 32 highway. I have been back to the dealer, but he says there is nothing wrong. I would like to call Ford and complain. Who would I call? Leo

Dear Leo: Gas mileage will vary from car to car, as with engine design. Owner driving habits also affect gas mileage. As for complaining to Ford, there is a customer assistance toll-free number in the owner's manual. I find it hard to believe that the city mileage ranges from 13.7 to 18 mpg. When check-

SPARE PARTS

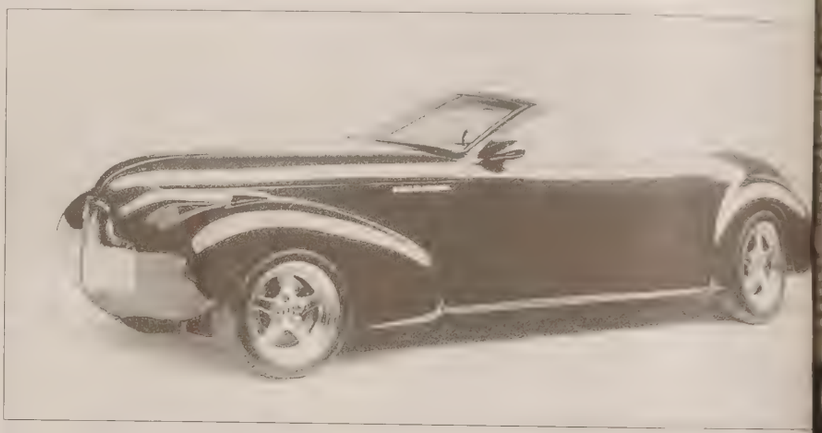

Show Car: The Buick Blackhawk is designed to emphasize the car company's heritage of distinctive design and outstanding power for audiences attending custom/hot rod shows.

The Blackhawk is a 2+2 convertible with a retractable top and a body that looks like it came out of the late 1930s or 1940s. Its face is a classic 1939 Buick grille, and its sheet metal combines the sleek bodies of 1941 and 1948 Buick Roadmasters. The Blackhawk's powertrain is a 1970-vintage, 455 cubic-inch Buick GS Stage III V8 engine that generates 463 horsepower at 4,600 rpm and 510 lb-ft of torque at 4,200 rpm.

Safety Test: When test-driving a new car, evaluate its safety features. The National Automobile Dealers Association says the driver should sit at least 10-12 inches from the steering wheel

The top of the head restraint should be adjusted to reach slightly above ear level. Also, test the safety belt by making sure it fits comfortably and securely over the shoulder and across the lap stranded because the person is out of gas or has a dead battery. There's a new way to roll along more smoothly when the vehicle is out of gas.

Empty tank

What's your excuse? The gas gauge is wrong, there must be a leak, or someone didn't fill up when he or she should have.

Most excuses are feeble at best, yet running out of gas is the most frequent reason for roadside emergency calls.

Now Pennzoil has seen to it you have no excuse at all.

The big yellow one has sent Rescue to the rescue. Introduced last fall, Rescue is a petroleum product in a compact Pennzoil-yellow plastic bottle. This lifesaver is the equivalent of a half-gallon of gasoline. Unlike actual gas, Rescue is safe to carry in your car. (The product is good for up to five years.)

Fresh out of gas? Grab the Rescue (which you have wisely bought the minute you read this) and, using its handy built-in spout, pour it into your gas tank. Restart your car. Be aware that Rescue works only when your engine is hot from running, so don't go to a double-header ballgame or take a nap. You should get about the same mileage from Rescue that you do from gasoline.

That gives you about 10 miles to find a gas station and fill your tank with the usual stuff. If you run dry in a truly remote area, you may need two doses of Rescue to get to a pump, but at $14.99 a half-gallon, the product is clearly not intended for steady use. Nor is it for diesel engines.

Dead battery

Maybe your car doesn't warn you about your headlights. Or maybe something else in the welter of electrical equipment is draining the juice and killing your battery.

Whatever the situation is, if the charge drops below 11.7 volts, your car will not start.

With most recent cars, not all is instantly restored even if you do have jumper cables and manage to find a donor car and get the engine running.

The radio is probably now blinking fitfully, and you have to recode it to get it working.

And jump-starts can be dangerous, too. You can zap expensive computer systems or even cause the battery to explode.

Some new cars have a built-in protection that monitors the battery and disconnects it when it gets too low.

BLI International has an aftermarket device that does much the same thing and can easily be added to any car.

Called PriorityStart!, it hoards enough power in a draining battery to assure you a start by mechanically disconnecting the battery when the voltage drops toward the danger zone and reconnecting automatically when you turn the ignition key

PriorityStart! is easy to attach (and easy to detach) to put on your next car.

The automotive unit costs about $70 (BLI International make one for boats, too.) Call 800-780-8276 to order one or locate a dealer.

Time right for clock maker to own '41 Plymouth

The 1941 Plymouth saw the family through the gas-rationing days of World War II. Afterward, it was replaced by a 1947 Plymouth in which [illegible] Cheslock learned to drive.

After 40 years of thinking about [illegible] Plymouth was all Barry could [illegible]. He had to have a 1941 Plymouth. By 1985, he had found a two-[illegible] green four-door sedan [illegible] it was ailing, he bought it [illegible] second four-door Plymouth in even [illegible] condition was purchased for [illegible] as a parts car.

For 10 years, Cheslock not only had the joy of experiencing antique car ownership, but he also was learning all the intricacies of 1941 Plymouths — as he took parts from one [illegible] to the other. By 1995, he had [illegible] squeezed all the fun he could [illegible] in the Plymouth sedan when [illegible] else decided he could not [illegible] without the car.

This time was right, so Cheslock [illegible] the car thinking he had satisfied his appetite for a 1941 Plymouth. [illegible] hours quickly passed. On March [illegible] of this year, the retired clock [illegible] was surfing e-bay on the Internet when a cream-colored 1941 [illegible] with convertible flashed on his [illegible]. Closer examination disclosed the car was being sold by a [illegible] Kan. man. Although Cheslock [illegible] thought about bidding on the [illegible] reality set in.

Cheslock was in the midst of a [illegible] restoration project at home, with normalcy disrupted and no time or place for an antique car. In addition, the car was half a continent away.

Ten days later, he was once more visiting the e-bay site when the 1941 Plymouth convertible reappeared. The high bidder from its earlier appearance had failed to come up with the cash. Building an addition on his house or not, Cheslock — after seeing the car for the second time — thought "This car is meant for me."

After perusing the pictures and making the high bid, Cheslock was soon informed he was the new owner of the 1941 Plymouth convertible. As the end of May approached, the car was picked up in Kansas and delivered to Virginia. Cheslock was anxiously awaiting when the truck pulled up in front of his home. The 3,206-pound Charlotte ivory car was rolled onto the street on wide, white-side wall 6.00x16-inch tires.

"Looks-wise, it met my expectations," Cheslock said. "However, it wouldn't start." Consequently, the 16 1/2-foot-long convertible was pushed up the driveway and into the garage. Even with such adversity Cheslock was happy he had made the purchase. As it turned out, the car was simply out of gasoline.

Beneath the engine hood, capped with a ship for a hood ornament, is a trusty 201-cubic-inch, 87-horsepower, six-cylinder engine fed by a Carter carburetor that would spring to life when the floor starter was stepped upon.

"They were advertised," Cheslock said, "as good hill climbers."

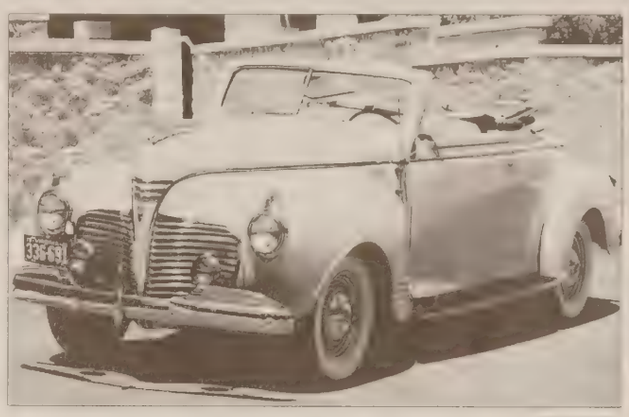

His Plymouth carried a base price of $970 when new. The sale price of this car undoubtedly would have been higher since it is equipped with an eight-tube deluxe radio, as well as a Mopar deluxe heater.

Chrome-plated bumper wing tips, along with center bumper guards, were extra-cost accessories. Cheslock has added optional fog lights and the larger 10-inch hubcaps.

A feeling of deja vu sweeps over Cheslock whenever he occupies the driver's seat and grips the three-spoke steering wheel. He instinctively reaches for the correct switch or control in the proper location. He knows the top control is at the far side of the dashboard, with the emergency brake warning light at the other end of the dashboard.

When the restored 1941 Plymouth was delivered, Cheslock saw the odometer had recorded 67,000 miles, which he believes to be accurate. He hasn't added many miles since taking possession, but that is about to change.

"I feel confident of the car," Cheslock said with an eye toward future journeys. "I'm hooked on 1941 Plymouths."

Jaguar SS-100. Many of handcrafted vehicles have [illegible] not available in the [illegible] vehicles, such as stereo, [illegible] conditioning, power steering, power brakes and automatic transmissions.

Most of the cars displayed have been built by individuals [illegible] as a recreational craft [illegible] that allows the whole [illegible] to contribute their skills [illegible] a finished vehicle they [illegible] can enjoy.

Typically a builder will purchase a "kit" from a kit car manufacturer. The kit usually contains essentially all the parts needed to assemble a complete vehicle, with the exception of the engine, transmission and various accessories.

By selecting an engine and transmission from a modern production car, the maintenance is simpler and more economical than finding parts for a pedigreed original.

Many kit manufacturers and assemblers will also display their products at the show and will be willing to answer questions about their products and services.

Some of the handcrafted cars are not built from kits but are designed and assembled totally by their creators and owners.

In other cases the term "styling kits" is appropriate since the starting point for the project is a complete production car such as a Pontiac Fiero, a Porsche 911 or a Chevrolet Camero.

The car body is modified to give it a different appearance, but the mechanical features are unchanged from the original car.

The show will be open September 9 and 10, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday. The San Leandro Marina is located at the foot of Marina Boulevard.

To get there take I-880 to San Leandro, then go west on Marin Boulevard to the marina. A $3 per person donation is requested to defray expenses associated with the show.

Doctor

suggest a civil action, not small claims. Ask for all your out-of-pocket expense and lost work time.

Dear Doctor: Ever since I purchased my 1999 Jeep Grand Cherokee, the front and rear rotors have gone out of round and needed to be resurfaced or replaced at 4,000 mile intervals. Do you think these rotors are underrated for the size of this vehicle? Would aftermarket drilled rotors be a better choice? Mike

Dear Mike: You are not alone with pulsating brake problems. Pulsating brake rotors have been an ongoing problem and are getting worse, not better. I see warped brake rotors on various makes and models. Some manufacturers will continue to replace warped brake rotors even after the warranty has expired. The aftermarket rotors I have installed have never warped or caused pulsation.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1991 T-Bird 3.8-liter V6 automatic transmission with 153,000 miles. The transmission has a harsh downshift from 4th to 3rd gears. Could this turn out to be a serious problem? Roy

Dear Roy: Mitchell's On-Demand and Alldata list many technical service bulletins on transmission shift concerns. I suggest you go to a transmission shop that has access to these bulletins as soon as possible. Prolonged harsh shifting will cause premature transmission wear and failure.

Dear Doctor: My daughter drives a 1993 Toyota Corolla five-speed manual and is home for the summer. I drove the car the other day and noticed some hesitation and bucking. The Toyota dealer didn't find a problem. What do you think? John

Dear John: Your daughter's Corolla is seven years old. Here are some things to look at: distributor cap, rotor, and plug wires. An often overlooked part, the ignition coil, should be replaced as a regular service. Use only Toyota tune-up parts and have the technician clean the fuel injectors and EGR valve.

Dear Doctor: I have an ongoing intermittent stalling problem with my 1992 Oldsmobile Cutlass Cierra. The engine stalls while I am driving or stopping. Often the engine will restart immediately; other times it will start only after 10 tries. There is never a smell of gas when the engine stalls. I have had all sensors and the computer replaced and still have the problem. Any suggestions? George

Dear George: Intermittent stalling problems that do not set trouble fault codes are often very hard to find.

You should take your car to a shop that does engine performance work. The technicians will perform some basic tests, including fuel and spark tests, and a complete check of technical service bulletins.

Dear Doctor: I am the original owner of a 1978 Dodge XE Magnum with 91,000 miles. The engine will stall out a mile from home. Occasionally it is also hard to start. What do you think the problem is? Gloria

Dear Gloria: Leave the car overnight at a local repair shop. Let the technician hook up a spark tester, start the car in the morning and go for a test drive. When the engine stalls out, he will be able to check for spark. A lean running engine, a defective carburetor preheat tube, or rich choke — all could be part of the problem.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1993 Buick Century 3.3-liter V6 with 40,000 miles. At 20,000 miles the engine developed a hesitation problem. I have to press the gas pedal several times before the engine responds. I have had a tune-up, but the problem remains. There are no warning lights on the dashboard indicating a problem. Do you have any ideas? Vicki.

Dear Vicki: Gas pedal hesitation on just about any vehicle indicates a lean fuel condition. In your case, a weak throttle position sensor is a very common problem and sometimes will not set off a "check engine" light. Have the shop check fuel pressure and use a lab scope on the throttle position sensor. Also, I recommend the replacement of the oxygen sensor as a maintenance item at five years or 50,000 miles.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1998 Mazda Millenia. My problem is the inside of the windows always seem to build up a haze after sitting in the sun. This situation happens only in the hot summer months, never in the winter. I do not smoke. What is the problem? Don

Dear Don: The haze of film that builds up on the inside of the win-

Weighing in at 1.9 pounds, the device attaches in seconds to your steering wheel. It has a high-security Raiton lock; and like the Pedal Jack, the lock has over 100,000 code combinations with keys that can't be duplicated or replaced. The Billy Bat retails for $24.95. To order the Pedal Jack or Billy Bat, contact Unelko Security Systems at 480/991-7272, or visit the company's Web site at www.unelkosecurity.com.

■ PIAA Corporation, USA has introduced the first anti-theft device for auxiliary lights. PIAA's Anti-Theft Device connects to most commercially available vehicle alarm systems. Any attempt to illegally remove a light will trigger the alarm, thus deterring the theft.

The device comes with easy-to-follow installation instructions and wiring that matches a typical alarm system. The company says most vehicle owners should be able to install the device themselves in just a few minutes. An ATD kit includes the device with color-coded wiring and wire connectors. Also provided is an ATD decal which can be displayed in the vehicle's windshield. The suggested list price for the ATD kit is $37.79, and the kit is available through any retailer selling PIAA lights. To find a retailer near you or for more information, visit the company's Web site at www.piaa.com.

■ According to Reflex Enterprises, studies have shown that one out of six vehicles require headlight replacement due to damage from road debris. The company has introduced new X-Pel Clear Protective Light Shields to help prevent breaking, cracking and pitting of headlights, fog lights, and turn signal lights.

Do-it-yourself kits fitting most 1988 to 2000 vehicles are available from $19.95 to $59.95. The shields are precision die-cut for a perfect fit. They are made of D.O.T.-approved scratch resistant material and do not change the appearance of the vehicle. The X-Pel kits are backed by a $1,000 headlight replacement guarantee and a four-year product warranty. For more information, visit the company's Web site at www.xpel.com;phone 800-447-9928.

■ Draw-Tite, a leading manufacturer of hitch and towing accessories, has introduced the Bug Shield to protect your vehicle from insects, stones and road debris. The Bug Shield's full-wrap feature offers protection for the front of your vehicle. The product is custom designed for an exact fit to various vehicle specifications and has a smoke design to complement various color schemes.

The Bug Shield is manufactured from virtually unbreakable polycarbonate. The product features easy installation, with a choice of screw-on or no-drill foam tapes. The company offers other plastic accessories, including taillight covers, side window louvers for extended cab pickups and side window air deflectors. Depending on vehicle specifications, the Bug Shield retails for $40-$55. It is available from most hitch installers. For a list of dealers, visit the company Web site at www.draw-tite.com.

SINCE CARMAKERS manufacture the vehicle's brake and clutch pedals to be unbreakable, the "saw-proof" Pedal Jack attaches to the brake pedal (and clutch pedal for manual transmissions) to stop vehicular theft.
